His Work and Power, Dead

What Effect on 1936?

Power in Personality

Huey Long is dead at 42 years of age.

The world says:

"How young, how pitiful, to die without full opportunity?"

Everything is comparative. Alexander the Great, who died at 32, was ruler of half the world at 25; Keats died at 26; Shelley at 30. Today men do not develop as rapidly as in old days when Napoleon thought of suicide because he had done nothing at an age that found Alexander ruler of the world.

The death of Huey Long, regretted throughout a nation that loathes cowardly assassination, is important not alone because of Senator Long's powerful personality, but also because of its possible effect on the national election of 1936.

Bitterly hostile to President Roosevelt and his policies, Huey Long had announced his intention to fight the administration in the coming election, saying that if he approved the Republican candidate, he might support the Republican ticket; otherwise, he would run as an independent Democrat.

It can never be known what following he would have had.

With Senator Long's death that which he stood for, in so far as he is concerned, comes to an end. His work was typical of political undertakings in America, from national administrations to "city reforms." The individual works, disappears, leaving no organization. His plans and efforts die with him.

Every four or eight years we have a new President, a new cabinet, a new "spoils" system, everything new, except when power outside of government rules, and impresses its will on succeeding administrations. That has been known.

Fortunately, nothing really good, once started, ever dies. The idea remains, and ideas have eternal life.

Senator Long's "My First Days in the White House," finished just before he died, a book that he was destined never to hold in his hand, will enable its readers to speculate intelligently. In that book, Senator Long reveals political plans and his opinions of public men, in word and caricature.

You learn that if chosen President he would select former Governor Alfred E. Smith for a most important position, that of budget director, with Cabinet rank. This indicates that once possessed of power, Long would use it cautiously. Former Governor Smith could hardly be expected to "share the wealth" too recklessly.

Senator Long is gone; his power ceases, as though he had never lived. Others will pick up the reins of power, in New Orleans and Louisiana; another will take his place in the Senate. Efforts, futile, will be made to find "another Huey Long."

There is nothing left but the memory of a powerful man, again emphasizing Goethe's definition of "personality," as "the highest good fortune on earth's children."

"Personality" that cannot be described was Senator Long's in the highest degree.

During the Democratic convention of 1932, in Chicago, while Governor Smith's fight continued against the nomination of Newton D. Baker and other conditions made Franklin D. Roosevelt's nomination possible, a short, stocky man with a strong Southern accent appeared on the platform. It was Huey Long, appearing to demand what he believed to be his political rights and GETTING THEM.

Not one in a hundred gathered in the great hall knew his name or ever had heard of him. But the moment he spoke everybody knew that he was "SOMEBODY." One reporter, sitting with others below the speaker's stand, after Long appeared, telegraphed to a well-known newspaper man in the West:

"There is one powerful man at this convention, somebody named Huey Long from New Orleans, who makes other 'great Democrats' here look and sound like white mice."

When the writer, later, saw Senator Long in New Orleans, then well in his political stride, it was amazing to see how Long handled men about him, the most important officers of the state. He summoned them by telephone, not with Sunday school language, dealt with them, controlled them as easily as a child controls her dolls.

He had the power, he knew it and THEY knew it.

A newspaper man said to him: "Senator Long, if this country should ever have a dictator, which Heaven forbid, you might easily be the man."

Long smiled, without denial,

Geneva, Sept. 11—Great Britain threw its whole weight behind the League of Nations' "covenant in its entirety" in a declaration of policy by Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign minister, before the League assembly today.

At the same time, Sir Samuel warned the world that if the League fails to enforce a peaceful settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute the "main bridge" binding England to the continent will have collapsed.

The bold pledge to back the covenant "in its entirety" was interpreted as an indication that Great Britain will not shrink from

CURLEY WINS FIGHT FOR COUNCIL

Governor Curley today won his battle to gain full control of the executive council.

Phillip J. Russell, Democrat, of Fall River, was confirmed as the successor to Edmund J. Cote, Republican.

The council approved Russell by a vote of four to three.

Republican Councillor J. Arthur Baker of Pittsfield settled it by not voting at all.

Baker's refusal to vote left three Republicans to vote against Russell, while there were four Democrats voting for him.

With Russell confirmed, the executive council now has a Democratic majority for the first time in history. There are five Democrats and four Republicans.

BAKER EXPLAINS

Governor Curley cannot now be balked by the council in making appointments, many of which are to be made in the next few months. He will also be able to remove department heads whenever he wishes.

Councillor Baker explained his refusal to vote in a long statement.

The substance of it was this:

"If I vote for Russell, the Republicans will say I am to be rewarded by the Democrats. If I vote against him, the Democrats will say I am to be rewarded by the Republican party."

Baker asserted that he had been promised a big reward by some Republicans if he would consistently oppose Governor Curley.

CITES G. O. P.

He said:

"It is no secret that I have been told that if I would stand fast, I could have any honor within the gift of the Republican party, from the lieutenant-governorship down."

He said one group of Republicans had "nefariously" circulated rumors that Governor Curley was to reward him with a judgeship. He said this group was "unconscionable, abusive and malicious."

Fuchs, Allen and Watt Named to Pension Posts

Judge Emil Fuchs, former president of the Boston Braves, this afternoon was appointed by Governor Curley as chairman of the new State Social Security Commission, created to administer the State's part of the old age and unemployment insurance program passed by Congress.

Judge Fuchs, named to represent "the public," will receive an annual salary of $6,500, if confirmed by the executive council.

Governor Curley also nominated former Governor Frank G. Allen, Republican, to serve on the commission at a salary of $6,000, to represent "the employers," and Robert J. Watt, secretary-treasurer of the Massachusetts branch of the American Federation of Labor, to represent "the employes," at a similar salary.

No More Tennis—Ever—With Brother Frankie!

Never again will these brothers and sisters play tennis and other games with six-year-old Frank Jubett of Wilson park, Brighton. Brother Frankie was killed today when an auto truck hit him and a boy companion. Near tears as they collect Frankie's most prized belongings are Ernest, Kenneth, Tina, Phyllis and Lewis Jubett.

Truck Kills Boy, 6, Chum Is Dying

A small boy was crushed to death under the wheels of a Boston Elevated maintenance truck in Commonwealth avenue, Brighton, today, and his chum was crushed so badly it is believed he will die.

Frank Jubett, 6, of Wilson park, Brighton, was killed. Paul Killilea, 4, of Mt. Hood road, Brighton, was taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

The truck backed over the boys as they played on the grass reservation in the center of Commonwealth avenue near Sutherland road.

William O'Brien of Kempton street, Roxbury, the driver, who was to make repairs to the trolley wires at that point, said he did not see the boys.

Democrat War Chest Deep in Red

Washington, Sept. 11—The Democratic National Committee disclosed today it was heading into next year's political campaign with only $14,890 in the bank and pledges of $1170 against unpaid bills and debts of $417,858.

The party's financial condition was given in a report filed with South Trimble, House clerk, by John Grimes, assistant treasurer.

PAJAMA PROMENADE

Donald Donovan, 2, of Gordon terrace, Newton, climbed out of his crib this morning, opened the back door and went wandering in his pajamas.

On Center street near Newton Corners, Patrolmen Harold Hoyt and Lawrence O'Donnell, in a cruising car, found him at 6:30 a. m.

Donald couldn't tell his name. But he could say:

"Hello, cop."

They gave him a ride to the station, put a police cap on him, pinned a badge on his pajamas and had the matron, Mrs. G. C. Carey, give him breakfast.

Meanwhile his mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Donovan, got up and discovered the boy was missing.

They looked around the house, then around the yard, then up and down the street, and finally went to the police station.

Donald would just as soon have stayed at the police station all day.

His voice was mournful as he said:

"So long, cops."

FR. COUGHLIN'S CALL

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 11—An unheralded visit of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit radio priest, to the summer "White House" here yesterday was disclosed today, although purport of the conference was not revealed.

Contrary to custom, the cleric's call was said to have been arranged in a direct phone call to the Roosevelt home by Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, rather than through the temporary offices at Poughkeepsie.

Kennedy was reported to have made the appointment for Father Coughlin from New York, leaving even Marvin H. McIntyre, of the presidential secretariat, unaware of the visit until after it had occurred.

Father Coughlin departed for Great Barrington, Mass., after his call on the President.

Great Barrington, Sept. 11—Rev. Charles E. Coughlin was the first to inform President Roosevelt at the summer "White House" in Hyde Park, N. Y., yesterday of the death of Senator Huey P. Long.

Father Coughlin said he learned of the Senator's death at Albany, and was the first to see the President when he arose.

The nature of his brief chat with Mr. Roosevelt was not revealed.

Alice O'Leary Sues For Divorce

Alice O'Leary, "radio songbird," filed suit for divorce today in Middlesex court. Mrs. O'Leary charged Arthur O'Leary of Medford with gross and confirmed habits of intoxication and cruelty.

Judge Joseph W. Monahan granted the radio star temporary custody of her two children, Thomas T. and Alice, 3. He ordered O'Leary to pay his wife $12 a week for the support of the children pending disposition of the divorce action.

The suit came as a shock to many friends of both. They both were born and educated in Malden.

In specifications, Mrs. O'Leary charges her husband contracted habits of intoxication in 1934.

She also charged that in May he threatened to take the two children from their Medford home. They were married on April 12, 1927.

Coal Post to Hosford

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 11 (AP)—Appointment of Charles F. Hosford, Jr., of Pittsburgh to the new coal stabilization commission appeared a certainty today with his recommendation to President Roosevelt by Senator Guffey, author of the legislation.

'WEISS HAD TO KILL OR BE KILLED'

By International News Service

St. Louis, Sept. 11—Dr. Carl Austin Weiss was chosen by lot to assassinate Senator Huey Long and had to kill Long or be killed Earle J. Christenberry, secretary to Senator Long, is quoted as telling Harry D. Brundidge, reporter for the St. Louis Star-Times, in a copyright story appearing in that paper today.

Under a Baton Rouge dateline and Brundidge's by-line, the Star-Times story states:

"Dr. Carl Austin Weiss had to kill U. S. Senator Huey Pierce Long, Jr., or be killed. Weiss drew the short straw.

"He was a member of a committee banded together to wipe out Long and his dictatorship.

"The committee members drew lots and the young doctor, rabid because the Kingfish had ridden roughshod over the political fortunes of a family into which he was married, was selected.

BECAME MARTYR

"Weiss knew his fate when he bought the weapon with which the assassination was accomplished. He knew he would die before the guns of the dictator's bodyguards.

"But he also knew that death also might await him if he failed. So it was that in the brown marble corridor of the 34-story Capitol he shot its builder down.

"In the eyes of a large portion of the population of Louisiana, Weiss, by his act, became a martyr—not a murderer.

"These are the assertions of Earle J. Christenberry, secretary to Senator Long. They were made today to this writer as we stood within a few feet of the bronze casket containing the remains of Long."

Christenberry is quoted by Brundidge as saying:

"The Senator knew it was coming. He knew that a committee had been organized with the sole purpose of assassinating him. He knew he was marked for death. The original plan was to accomplish his assassination in the National Capitol.

LONG KNEW OF PLOT

The article then quotes Christenberry as stating that Senator Long "knew he was on the spot."

"He knew it," Christenberry is quoted as continuing, "because he had a transcript of statements made in a New Orleans hotel last July 31 at a meeting of his enemies. Some person who attened that meeting said:

"'If would take in a lottery to go out and kill Long. It would take only one man, one gun and one shot.'

"Whether Dr. Weiss attended that secret session remains to be seen, I think he did and that eventually it will be proved that he did."

Sensational charges, made in St. Louis today by Senator Long's secretary, bear out the "death pact" revelations made yesterday by Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, as published in the Boston Evening American.

4 LONG FACTIONS BATTLE FOR DEAD RULER'S POWER

By Associated Press

Baton Rouge, La., Sept. 11—From the bier of Huey Long, politicians will turn to Louisiana's political battlefield, cleared of its most famous warrior by an assassin's bullet, to engage in duels.

Out of the group warfare leaders will appear to carry the standards of the Long and anti-Long factions.

Until Huey Long's body is laid away tomorrow on the State Capitol lawn, nothing will be done under the public eye. As soon as Long died, however, underground jockeying began.

Four district groups already have risen to challenge leadership in the Long organization.

These groups, always backing and pulling one against another, were held in line by Long, who ruled with a rod of steel. He throttled in its inception any signs of revolt and held his followers solidly behind him.

Senator Long will be buried tomorrow afternoon on the State House lawn. His body will lie in state from 3 p. m. (EDT) today until 6 p. m. (EDT) tomorrow.

Thousands will pass the bier. Friends handling the funeral plans have prepared for the most impressive burial ceremony in the history of the state.

So far all the seekers for leadership have agreed for the time being to stand behind Governor O. K. Allen, titular head of the Long machine. Allen, however, feels uncertain of his course.

If anti-Long factions could be welded into a solid group they might seriously challenge the Long organization.

Long's machine will run for a time on its own momentum. Even without leadership it is undeniably the strongest political organization in the state.

FOUR LEADERS VIE

It will put up a stiff fight in January, when senators, congressmen, a governor and other state officers will be nominated.

The first threat of disintegration may come with the appointment of Long's successor in the United States Senate and later when a slate of candidates is prepared for January. Whoever are selected by the caucus, there will be disappointments and wounded feelings that may result in desertions.

A look into the opposition camp also discloses chaos. There stands Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley of New Orleans, until recently leader of the strong city ring which was broken up by Long.

The mayor must be considered in any anti-Long organization, but leaders in the country sections, represented by the members of Congress may Walmsley would not be acceptable outside of the city.

In the country parishes are two Congressmen, Cleveland Dear and J. Y. Sanders, Jr., each ambitious to become governor.

While the major factions are engaged in civil war, the Square Deal Association, organized to stop Long, is churning steadily away in an effort to have legislators elected who will repeal Long's dictatorial laws.

The spirit of Huey Long guided to an end today his final special session of the Louisiana Legislature.

Long had been assassinated the second night of the five-day session, but his majority forces in both houses could be relied on to rot "aye" on his dictatorial measures as surely as though he were directing their passage from the chamber floors, as was his wont.

The "death" session was scheduled to end by 2 p. m. (EDT), an hour before his body was to lie in state in the Capitol where he was shot down.

ONE BILL WITHDRAWN

George M. Wallace, first assistant attorney-general, who collaborated on the bills with Long, took the senator's accustomed place at the controls of the legislative machinery.

He steered them toward final passage without much debate and without the cunning "explanations" of bills which Long gave at the head of the committee table.

Thirty-eight of the 39 bills were up for final passage today in the Senate. One, of a minor nature, had been withdrawn.

The House was called to act on amendments and completes its routine.

Since no effort was made at this session to repeal laws giving the state control of federal loans and grants to Louisiana, Secretary Ickes has said in Washington the government would not remove its restrictions against Louisiana applications.

Long added fuel to the fire in his quarrel with the federal government at this session with his so-called "States Rights" bills.

STRONG IN DEATH

He said these bills would prevent federal boards from exceeding their "constitutional authority in the state" and would force state approval of federal highway projects.

His redistricting bill, aimed to defeat Judge N. H. Pavy of Opelousas, father-in-law of Dr. C. A. Weiss, Jr., the man who assassinated Long, aroused the ire of anti-Long leaders, but a motion to table the bill was promptly overthrown.

New Orleans, whose government virtually was seized by Long, fared better at this session, as it was planned to restore to the city a million dollars in revenue taken by the state while Long was battling the city government under Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley's control.

ROOSEVELT FOE GONE

Huey Called Only Block in Path

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Sept. 11—Huey Long's tragic, spectacular exit from the national political stage removes the last lingering doubt that President Roosevelt will experience any embarrassment in the Democratic National Convention next year.

The way now is cleared for his unopposed renomination, on a platform of his own choosing.

Had he lived, the colorful "Kingfish" was calculated to make trouble. Not serious trouble, perhaps, for Mr. Roosevelt's renomination is and always has been assured.

But Huey planned to take an anti-Roosevelt delegation to the convention, and he impishly planned to throw a lot of resolutions and platform planks which would never get anywhere except to irritate those who will run the convention.

There was in Huey a lot of the small boy's inclination and capacity for mischief. Shrewd politician that he was, he realized he could get nowhere by opposing the inevitable renomination of Mr. Roosevelt.

TALMADGE STILL THREAT

Nevertheless, he was going to do so—and have a lot of fun in it, as well as giving considerable embarrassment to administration leaders.

The only other threat to a harmonious convention lies in Governor Eugene Talmadge of Georgia. Talmadge has been a runner-up to Huey in his distribes against the administration and against Mr. Roosevelt personally.

But with Huey gone, the moving spirit of the anti-Roosevelt sentiment in the party has been removed, and it was predicted today there will be no voice raised against what the White House wants in the next platform and convention proceedings.

Maybe that prediction will not prove true, maybe some new "anti" Messiah will appear. But at the moment politicians cannot see any. The opposition, what there is, will have to be furnished by the Republicans.

Bald, genial Jim Farley, who is expected to resign from the Cabinet in January to take over the management of the Roosevelt campaign, didn't like to comment today on Huey's death.

FARLEY NOT WORRIED

Poker-faced, he sat behind his ornate desk in the Postoffice Department and smilingly evaded all questions bearing on the shooting of Huey and the political results that may flow from it.

He did say, however, that he had never considered a possible third party movement in 1936 as a serious matter. There might have been one, he said, but he insisted there would have been no substance to it.

"And I now predict," he said, "that every state will send a delegation to the convention instructed for Roosevelt."

"What about Georgia? What about Louisiana?" he was asked.

"I stand on my statement," he said, grinning.

"And," he continued, still grinning, "if you want another prediction I will give you one. It is that the Republicans will carry fewer states than Hoover carried in 1932."

WHAT OF NEW ENGLAND

New England's disaffection, as demonstrated in the Rhode Island by-election, doesn't worry Farley.

"Why," he said, "we lost six states in 1933. Four of them were in New England. So what?"

The belief obtains here in well-informed quarters that the successors to Huey's dynasty in Louisiana, whether it be "Okay Oscar" Allen, or a triumvirate, will make peace with the national administration.

Huey's feud with the White House was largely personal and individual.

The colorful Kingfish had a way of making all his feuds personal. But his followers and those who will carry on for him have not the same faculty.

There is federal patronage in Louisiana that is of considerable value to whoever takes over the State machine. This patronage was denied to Huey. It may not be denied to Huey's successors—provided they elect to play ball.

Huey Killer's Heritage

New Orleans, Sept. 11—The racial heritage of Dr. Carl A. Weiss, Jr., slayer of Senator Huey P. Long, was German-Jewish, and he was by birth a Roman Catholic.

The combination, strange in other parts of the country, is not uncommon in Louisiana.

Weiss' father was from a German-Jewish family which came here 100 years ago, and all the members have been Catholics.

Similarly, the Godchaux family, noted here, are French Jews and Catholics for at least the century they've lived in the state.

At Yucatan a dance by Miss Jo Axelrod of Boston and a "mood moderno" by Miss Micki Cullen of New York also drew the fire of the churchmen.

THRONG TO PASS HUEY'S BIER

Baton Rouge, La., Sept. 11—Eager throngs stormed the State Capitol here today for a final glimpse of the body of their fallen leader—Senator Long, victim of an assassin.

In the marble-walled rotunda of the magnificent $5,000,000 State House he erected, the body of the slain "dictator" lies in state from 8 o'clock (EDT) this afternoon until 8 o'clock (EDT) tomorrow.

After the body is placed in the beautiful rotunda it will remain forever within the shadows of the towering 33-story State House.

AGED FATHER THERE

Senator Long's 82-year-old father, Huey P. Long, Sr., arrived from Winnfield and viewed the body of his son last night in the Rabenhorst funeral home, from which all save relatives and close friends were excluded.

The body, clad in a Tuxedo, lay in a massive bronze casket in the chapel of the mortuary in exactly the same spot where the day before the body of Senator Long's assassin, Dr. Weiss, had rested in a gray cloth sealed casket.

It was the ardent wish of every Long friend, intimate and distant, that he be buried on the spacious and beautifully groomed lawn of the State House.

IMPRESSIVE FUNERAL

The family was relieved of the details of the funeral arrangements, which were placed in the hands of a group of the senator's closest friends, headed by Governor Oscar K. Allen, Long's life-long friend.

Under their direction plans were going forward for the most impressive funeral in all Louisiana's history.

A picked detail of Louisiana National Guardsmen, members of the military unit which so frequently was called upon by Senator Long to serve him in life, will serve him in death.

The detail will escort the body from the funeral home to the capitol, stand guard while it lies in state, and again at the grave.

and continued, without exaggeration, relating his state in providing his state, particularly farm regions, with good roads, and giving free books to children in the public and parochial schools.

Senator Long, able politician, powerful personality, knew how to inspire loyalty in his followers and fear in his opponents. Many a man in the Senate, while Long was there, kept bottled up within his own chest things that he would have liked to say. Fear of Long's answer kept him silent.

Senator Long is part of the past. A picturesque chapter in American life is closed. Long's career shows what great power is developed among plain men in all parts of this country.

When the nation really needs a man, he will appear.

For Huey Long, Raleigh might have written his powerful invocation addressed to death, in his "Historie of the World":

"O eloquent, just, and mightie death! Whom none could advise, thou hast perswaded; what none hath dared, thou hast done; and whom all the world hath flattered, thou only hast cast out of the world and despised. Thou hast drawne together all the farr stretched greatnesse, all the pride, crueltie, and ambition of man, and covered it all over with these two narrow words, hic jacet!"

LONG CAPITOL BURIAL URGED

By Associated Press

Baton Rouge, La., Sept. 11—The Louisiana Legislature today adopted a resolution recommending burial of Senator Huey P. Long on the grounds of the state capitol.

The resolution was approved by the House of Representatives unanimously with no discussion.

The senate adopted unanimously a concurrent resolution providing for attendance of the legislature in a body at funeral services.

They then passed the bill which takes St. Landry parish out of the judicial district over which Judge N. H. Pavy presides. He was father-in-law of Dr. Carl A. Weiss, Jr., Senator Long's slayer.

The bill was interpreted as placing Judge Pavy in a district where he would be defeated in the next election.

GIRL HOLDS STATE'S FATE

Long Machine's Cash Controlled by Tax Collector, Alice Tharpe, 28

Baton Rouge, La., Sept. 11—In the slender hands of pretty petite 28-year-old Mrs. William Tharpe, the former Alice Lee Grosjean, associate of Senator Huey Long throughout his spectacular rise to power, today rested the purse strings of the Louisiana political machine.

As supervisor of public accounts, one of the several high offices that have fallen to her through a friendship that began with Long when she was in her teens in Shreveport and Long only an ambitious young lawyer, Mrs. Tharpe controls huge special funds on which Senator Long largely depended to operate his dictatorship.

With Long's assassination her office assumes tremendous importance in the future fate of the political organizatinon the Louisiana senator founded and led with iron hand.

MRS. WILLIAM THARPE
Custodian of Cash

Mrs. Tharpe is charged with complete authority in the collection of all special taxes. These include taxes on liquor, soft drinks, tobacco, gasoline—source of practically all state revenues except real estate.

Her office makes her the liquor czar of Louisiana. She had complete authority over the issuance of liquor sale permits.

Intensely loyal to Senator Long in life, Mrs. Tharpe today kept her own council. She refused any statement to the press.

While her office hold high authority in the matter of collection of large funds, disbursements are subject to legislative acts her position is appointive under the governor.

It was believed Mrs. Tharpe would give her allegiance, unswervingly to the present state administration.

Mrs. Tharpe's rise to high authority paralleled Long's.

At 17, just out of school, she became Long's stenographer. At that time Long was a young lawyer in Shreveport, member of the State Railroad Commission.

When Long became governor in 1928 he made her his private secretary.

During his term of governor Long laid the foundation for his phenomenal political dictatorship.

SHE WAS GOVERNOR

When he went to the United States Senate he made Alice Lee supervisor of public accounts, an office created by Long to cut red tape on normal allocations of the Treasury Department and made it possible to draw readily when funds were needed to carry on his extensive state administration.

For a short time, under Long's appointment, she held the office of secretary of state. One time while Governor Oscar Allen was away for a brief period, Long appointed her governor.

Married when a girl in Shreveport, she divorced her first husband a short time later. She was married a second time in 1933 to William Tharpe, now an employe in one of the state offices.

Young Roosevelt Sends Horse Home

By Associated Press

Beverly, Sept. 11—Quentin, the horse which Louise Barbour, debutante daughter of Professor Thomas H. Barbour, lent to John Roosevelt this summer, arrived back from Hyde Park, N. Y., today.

The President's son frequently had enjoyed riding Quentin in visits to the North Shore and Miss Barbour let him have the use of it shortly before she left for North Africa with her parents. She will return in a few weeks.

'Wise Cracks' Made Huey Long Famous

Huey Long's reputation was built largely on his rural philosophy expressed in "corn pone and pot likker" epigrams. For example:

"Unconstitutional? Hell, when I want anything done I do it and tell my attorney general to dig up a law to cover it."

"When I was a kid we got up early, worked till dark, ate, listened to the whip-poor-wills and went to bed."

"Properly played, the jewsharp expresses the deepest feelings of the human soul."

"They can impugn my sagacity and slander my name, but I won't stand for nobody slamming my pot likker recipe."

"I am the Constitution of Louisiana."

"I'm the Kaiser in this State."

"If I was left alone this State would be the Empire of Utopia."

"I know damn well they're good laws—I wrote 'em."

"I can sell anybody anything."

"It is rank heresy and a stigma to this fair State to crumble your corn bread in your pot likker. It had ought to be always dunked."

"This outfit (the House of Representatives) is just a collection of 435 dumbbells."

"I may be Kingfish down home, but in this pond (Washington as a new Senator) I'm just small fry."

"This (his filibustering speech ending the last Congress) may be my swan song."

"It don't make no difference if there's more voters than there is names on the census rolls. A lot of people live on boats and the census takers never find 'em."

"I'm gonna write a society book for this town (New Orleans) that'll teach it some manners."

New Friends Beckon 'Quins' From Mother Goose Pages

Looks interesting—The Mother Goose book—with all it holds of entertainment and delight—is still a mystery to "Quin" Marie Dionne. But like her four sisters, Marie has already developed a real interest in pictures. They excite her curiosity, and the brighter colored they are the better. The Mother Goose book is a regular mine of them It wont' be long now before all the quints will begin to talk and enjoy listening to Old Mother Hubbard, Little Miss Muffet, Bo Peep, Mary and the Lamb and scores and scores of others.

Woof! Woof! "And the big bear had a great big bowl, the middle-sized bear had a middle-sized bowl, and the little bear had a teeny-weeny bowl—just like the bowl you eat your own porridge out of, Miss Emelie Dionne." That's the old, old story which Nurse Lamoureux is telling her favorite "quin." And Emelie, all agog with interest, is reaching out to turn the page, just as if she understood.

O. K. FOR CITY'S $12,500,000 PLAN SEEN

By Associated Press

Washington, Sept. 11 — Mayor Mansfield of Boston said today he was "assured by responsible officials" that the city's entire $12,500,000 public works program would be approved.

The mayor said the program would involve federal grants of "about $3,000,000" and expenditure by the city of $7,000,000.

He said it might be necessary for the municipality "to accept a little less than 45 per cent grant, but the net result is a gain for the city of Boston."

The PWA allotments, under the $4,880,000,000 program, usually are made on a 45 per cent grant, 55 per cent loan basis.

Mansfield said he was unable to learn much about projects outside of Boston in Massachusetts, but added:

"I am satisfied that if the only obstacle is the high cost per-man-year that all worthy Massachusetts projects can be adjusted in the same way as Boston's and I am quite confident that not only the Boston program, but all worthy Massachusetts projects may be approved."

Atop Greased Flagpole, He Defies Law

By International News Service

New York, Sept. 11—"Shipwreck" Kelly, flagpole sitter extraordinary, defied the law today from his perch atop a 75-foot staff on a Bronx movie theater.

He ignored a summons to appear in magistrate's court sent up to him in his lunch pail.

"Come up and get me," he shouted, "I've greased the pole."

Magistrate Anna M. Kross was wroth when the summons was returned.

"I'm going to issue a warrant next and have the fire department execute it," she said.

Hatless Wales Startles Navy

By Associated Press

Cannes, Sept. 11—The easy holiday atmosphere of the Riviera today was offered in British naval circles as an excuse for the failure of the Prince of Wales to observe strict naval etiquette.

His lapse was that he boarded the destroyer Whishart hatless and, thus uncovered, raised his arm to acknowledge the guard's presentation of arms.

However, it was not a stiff salute, it was pointed out, such as would have been expected of him had he worn his hat aboard.

Mrs. Wally Simpson, the Prince's American companion on the visit to the destroyer, commanded by his cousin, Lord Louis Mountbatten, persuaded him to wear a hat, but he left it in the car at the dock, she explained.

Out of Red!

By International News Service

Chicago, Sept. 11—It was with pleasure that the Carter's Ink Company today reported a 20 per cent reduction in sales—of red ink.

Their 10 per cent gain in total business showed that the drop in red ink sales merely indicates that happy days are here again and few losses are being inscribed on business ledgers.

Believing Lie Costs Father His Daughter

If somebody told you your five-year-old child was dead—but offered no proof—what would you do?

Leon Russell accepted the story, reconciled himself to the child's death—and his action cost him the custody of five-year-old Marjorie Frances in Dedham court.

The little girl's future is to be that of a wealthy child—she is legally adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis G. Cates of Wellesley.

That was the decision of Judge McCoole in Norfolk Probate court, after testimony by Russell that he had accepted his estranged wife's story of the girl's death.

Russell contested the adoption, but the court ruled the child's future was more secure as the daughter of Cates, editor of the Babson Reports. Judge McCoole said:

"It seems very hard to rule against the parent, but we must think of the welfare of the child.

"I believe when the mother told him the child was dead, there should have been a suspicion in his mind.

"The mother had no papers, never took him to the graveyard. Any father separated from a little child should spend every effort to locate the child."

Duffer

Washington, Sept. 11—Huey Long was one golfer who never aspired to "break 80."

The Louisiana senator argued that when a player became that good, golf took first place and business second in his thoughts. Although he liked the game he insisted he played it more for exercise than sport.

BRITAIN DEMANDS LEAGUE ACTION TO AVERT WAR

DECLARES FOR "MORE THAN SANCTIONS" TO KEEP PEACE

sanctions if these become necessary to quench the African blaze.

The Italian delegates immediately interpreted the speech as a British "threat to quit the League unless the League obeys England."

Even the phrase "British blackmail" was heard in Italian delegation circles.

"WARNING TO ITALY"

The delegates of small nations, however, generally hailed the British diplomat's speech with enthusiasm. Said one delegate:

"It was not only a historic speech, but the greatest speech ever delivered before the League by a British statesman."

The delegate of one prominent neutral country said later that the blunt British declaration was not to be interpreted as an ultimatum to Premier Mussolini, but rather as an emphatic warning to Italy to think twice before rejecting the "last hope" compromise likely to be offered soon to Il Duce.

What irritated the Italians particularly was a veiled attack by Hoare on the Fascist regime when referring to the dangerous features of government propaganda, he said:

"Too often, artificial excitement of national feeling is made the excuse for the repudiation of obligations or for a threat of force."

AID TO THE BACKWARD

"We believe," said Sir Samuel in outlining the position of the British Empire, "that backward nations are, without prejudice to their independence and integrity, entitled to expect that assistance will be afforded them by more advanced peoples in the development of their resources and the building up of their national life."

A stir of excitement ran through the auditorium when Sir Samuel said that a spirit of war, "even of war for war's sake," has "raised its head in more places than one."

Sir Samuel told the assembly the British government was prepared to take its share of any collective attempt to "deal in a fair and effective way with the problem certainly troubling many people at present and which may trouble them even more in the future."

Taking up the most practical methods for asserting collective influence and achieving peaceful objectives, Sir Samuel declared the League is not a super state.

"MORE THAN SANCTIONS"

He said that in the last analysis the strength of the League did not depend solely on the economic or on the strength of public opinion and support behind each member government.

"Collective security, by which is meant the organization of peace and prevention of war by collective means, is in its perfect form not a simple but a complex conception," the foreign secretary said. "It means much more than what is commonly called sanctions. It means not merely Article XVI. but the whole covenant.

"It assumes the scrupulous respect for all treaty obligations. Its foundation is a series of fundamental obligations freely accepted by members of the League to submit any dispute likely to lead to war to peaceful methods of settlement according to a procedure provided by the covenant and not to resort to war for settlement of these disputes in violation of the covenant."

ETHIOPIAN DEFENSE

Tecle Hawariate, Ethiopian delegate, addressed the assembly in the afternoon in French, pleading for the continued independence of Ethiopia.

Baron Aloisi, head of the Italian delegation, sat by in an attitude of studied indifference.

"We are a Christian people," said Hawariate. "Our independence is menaced. Yet we have given proof of our humility.

"Before any menaces, any attacks, Ethiopia will associate herself with the ideals of the League of Nations."

He said Ethiopia had been blamed because of the existence of slavery, adding:

"But we did not invent slavery" and Ethiopia learned "it must liberate man."

Outside the assembly chamber it was learned that Premier Laval of France plans to telephone Premier Mussolini later today in a last appeal for a conciliatory attitude.

French quarters, which feel France's difficult position deeply, said they believed Laval would point out France's necessity to uphold the league principles emphasized so forcibly by Sir Samuel Hoare if the league is to be saved from collapse.

Britain Maintains Ban On Arms for Ethiopia

By Associated Press

London, Sept. 11—Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin motored in from his country place today for a two-and-a-half hour conference with his principal cabinet advisers and representatives of defense departments.

The conference took place during the address at Geneva of Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary.

Denial was made in authoritative quarters that the arms embargo on Ethiopia had been reconsidered or that Ethiopia had been privately assured the aid of Britain in getting arms if efforts for peace at Geneva fail.

It was also denied that there was any consideration of granting credit to Ethiopia for munitions should the embargo be removed.

Whites in Ethiopia Warned of Massacre

Djibouti, Sept. 11—Massacre of all whites in Ethiopia after war starts was the ominous forecast given would-be travellers to Addis Ababa today by representatives of the great powers here.

Officials pointed out the moment the war begins the railroad between Djibouti and Addis Ababa, Ethiopia's sole railway, will be cut, leaving foreigners in Ethiopia isolated.

First news of invasion of their country by Italians will, in the opinion of the consular corps here, so enrage the natives it will be doubtful whether Emperor Haile Selassie will be able to control them.

League Leaders Study "Graduated Sanctions"

(Copyright, 1935, by International News Service)

Geneva, Sept. 11 — A system of "graduated sanctions" against a possible aggressor in East Africa is being studied by members of the League of Nations council.

First would be partial closing of the Suez Canal, allowing food, medicines, and water to pass southward, but prohibiting transit of troops, arms, and munitions.

Other measures, of an economic character, would be adopted only if the first, or the first of the first, sanction were ineffective.

Il Duce Calls 50,000 For Army of Million

By Associated Press

Rome, Sept. 11—Premier Benito Mussolini's combing of Italy for the best available soldiers brought an irrevocable call to the colors today for 50,000 more men.

Military circles believed this would be the last draft necessary to carry out Il Duce's promise to arm one million men before October.

The call, reaching far back to the military class of 1900 (men born in that year), was issued in a batch of ministry decrees published in the official gazette.

Willert Wouldn't Bet Against War in Africa

By Associated Press

London, Sept. 11—Sir Arthur Willert, former head of the news department of the foreign office, today told the British and North American Club he would not like to bet against the likelihood of war in East Africa.

"I don't see war coming to Europe just now," he said, "but Ethiopia is a very different question. I would not like to put my money on there being no war there, but I don't like to think the statesmanship of civilization is so bankrupt as to allow war to spread to Europe."

WOMEN ARM FOR WAR

Beauty Leads Ethiopians

By Associated Press

Addis Ababe, Sept. 11—Ethiopian women set about mobilizing "battalions of death" throughout the empire today, ready for an imminent departure for the front.

In stern seriousness, these daughters and granddaughters of the female warriors who fought with fierce fanaticism against the Italians on the Adua battlefield of 1896 began sharpening their spears and sabres after Emperor Haile Selassie I accepted the offer of their services.

Their leader, the beautiful, tiger-eyed Madame Wayzaro Abebath Charkoze, told the Associated Press they had no fear of Italian airplanes and tanks.

"These mechanical things can be made by man, but only God can bestow courage, and he will enable us to triumph over the Italians," she asserted.

"When our husbands, brothers and fathers see us fighting side by side with them, they will have the courage of lions."

Madame Charkoze, 34 years old, with gleaming eyes and a quick step, is a wealthy landowner, but she has abandoned her home and family riches to defend her country, if need be, against any Italian advance.

The women's legion, dressed in natty uniforms of red capes, khaki breeches, leather puttees and Sam Brown belts, submitted an offer to go to the front yesterday and the king of kings accepted promptly.

Their organization, known in Amharic as "for love of country," has a membership of several thousand, with branches throughout the empire.

Despite the advice of the United States State Department, most of the Americans in Addis Ababa were staying here. The Ethiopian government assured Cornelius Van Engert, United States charge d'affaires, that all Americans wishing to leave could do so.

BACK BAY 'HEIR' HELD ON N. H. CHECK CHARGE

A youth with a weak heart, a Back Bay accent, a liveried chauffeur ad a pretty nurse was arrested today in Westport, N. Y., after allegedly leaving a flock of worthless checks in the White Mountain region.

From New Hampshire, he was trailed into Vermont, and from there to New York.

Authorities are trying to find out his real identity, if he is not Edmund Grinnell of Beacon street, Boston—the name and address he gave.

Police say he not only stopped at the best hotels, but called on the best doctors, and after accepting treatment for his heart, paid him with checks that bounced back from the banks.

With him were the nurse, Phyllis Goding, 22, of Whitefield, N. H., who innocently went into his employ, and Harold Wright of Fabyans, N. H., who likewise thought Grinnell was a millionaire. Wright acted as chauffeur.

According to New Hampshire authorities, who traced backwards as well as forwards, Grinnell made his first New England stop at the Biltmore in Providence.

From there he went by airplane to Bretton Woods, N. H., where an automobile was acquired and the nurse and chauffeur hired. All the White Mountain resorts saw the party after that.

AXE-WIDOW ON TRIAL TUESDAY

Portland, Sept. 11—Mrs. Mary E. Morrill, charged with slaying her husband, Herbert Morrill, with an axe, will go on trial in Cumberland County Superior Court Tuesday.

The trial date was set today by Judge George L. Emery, after a conference with County Attorney Walter M. Tapley and Harry L. Nixon, the woman's counsel.

The slaying of Morrill was revealed to the police by James R. Morrill, 10-year-old son of the couple, who lived in terror for a week in his home, knowing that his father's body was buried in the cellar.

Strangely enough, the boy when led to his mother's arrest is to play the dual role of star prosecution and defense witness.

From the lips of the child the state will attempt to show his mother murdered his father with an axe, wrapped the body in blankets and buried it in the cellar.

German Girl Spy Jailed in France

Brest, Sept. 11—Fraulein Lydia Oswald, the German "girl with the green eyes," was found guilty today of "attempted espionage" and sentenced to nine months in prison.

The naval court which found her guilty refused to believe her story that she quit spying when she fell in love with a French lieutenant, Jean De Forceville.

The lieutenant and a friend, Ensign Rene Guignard, were acquitted.

Inez Norton Wins Heir to Million

ROTHSTEIN SWEETIE TO WED YOUTH

Fails on Stage, Lucky in Love

INEZ NORTON

By International News Service

New York, Sept. 11—Inez Norton, constant companion of Arnold Rothstein, millionaire gambler, until he was killed in a $200,000 high spade game, is going to marry Thomas C. Neal, Jr., son of a retired Chicago bank president.

Young Neal, who is at least seven years her junior, said today that he had won his father's consent, and that he expects his parent to arrive in New York by plane to witness the ceremony late this afternoon or tomorrow morning.

Neal, who will inherit about a million dollars in a year, according to reports, is 24. Ines admits 31.

Neal admitted he had encountered initial opposition from his father, but added:

"Later we brought him around to our point of view."

TOGETHER ON CAPE COD

The couple recently have been seen together frequently at Cape Cod resorts.

After Rothstein's death Ines decided on a theatrical career. She was not much of a success, however, on either stage or screen.

Inez Norton is a southern beauty who had been twice married and twice divorced when she met Arnold Rothstein, "big shot" gambler.

She had been in the Follies and had worked as a model but received public attention only when the murder of Rothstein in 1928 revealed her as his sweetheart.

WINS COURT BATTLE

Although Rothstein had a wife living, he left a will settling $1,500,000 on the ravishing blonde. Just what she ever got out of his dwindled funds is problematical, but she won a long court battle for the $20,000 life insurance which he had made over to her.

She then went to Hollywood, expecting to appear in a film based on the gambler's life, but fortune was against her, she failed to make good and was reported to have attempted suicide.

She left Hollywood to appear on the stage in Chicago.

ROXBURY VET ON FIRST LIST OF STORM DEAD

Washington, Sept. 11—The first list of veterans definitely identified among those who lost their lives in the Florida hurricane was made public today by General Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs.

It comprises the names and last known addresses of the veterans and was forwarded to General Hines by Colonel George E. Iiams, who is in Florida representing the veterans' administration.

General Hines said that additional lists would be made public as soon as they are received. The first list includes:

Edward J. Hammond, Roxbury, Mass.; Brady Lewis, Concord, N. H., and Samuel C. Westfall, Hartford, Ct.

Van Zandt Charges Official "Whitewash"

By Associated Press

Washington, Sept. 11—Charging "gross negligence" in handling transient veterans caught in the Florida hurricane, James E. Van Zandt, commander-in-chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, today labeled the official report on the tragedy a "whitewash."

Van Zandt issued a statement calling on President Roosevelt to ignore the official report and take action against "officials guilty of negligence."

"If these officials had heeded the storm warnings or had been in the least familiar with seasonal climatic conditions, the tragedy could have been averted, all witnesses agree," Van Zandt declared.

"'Whitewash reports,' official though they may be, bear false testimony when eye witnesses, survivors and trained news gatherers are unanimous in the opinion that here was gross negligence on the part of properly constituted officials."

GIRL, DOCTOR, 3 FINED $2050

Springfield, Sept. 11—Fines totaling $2050 were imposed today on a girl, a doctor and three other men, arrested August 25 after police had seized 47,000 sweepstakes tickets.

Dr. Joseph Chausse, 48, of Montreal, was fined $1200 for promoting a lottery and $100 on a statutory charge on which Miss Irma Fischler, 21, of Montreal, also was fined $100.

They were not in court but Attorney George N. Hughes assured Judge Spooner that Dr. Chausse would appear September 26 to pay.

Realino Morel, 35, of Montreal, was fined $150, and Horace Desilets, 25, of Holyoke, and Vincent Nevin, 31, of Jersey City, $200 each, for promoting a lottery.

The sweepstakes was for the Montreal Postgraduate Hospital, which police said does not exist. Dr. Chausse was said to have claimed the money was to be used to build it. Tickets had been sent to doctors throughout New England.

THE NEW HAVEN R.R.

HITLER SCORNS WILSON POINTS, WARNS CHURCH

Nurnberg, Ger., Sept. 11—Reichsfuehrer Hitler, in a proclamation read to the Nazi party convention, rapped President Wilson's famous 14 points today, and the delegates assembled from all Germany burst into a bedlam of applause.

"Where are the 14 points of Wilson and where is the world today?" asked Hitler. "The Reich (Germany) is no longer a football and no longer an object of foreign maneuvering, but now is in security—in security, not by pacts, but by the real power of the nation and by the firm will of its leadership."

(President Wilson, in 1918, offered to the world in general and to Germany in particular a program of 14 points which served as the basis for the final peace ending the World War and for the eventual establishment of the League of Nations.)

SEES RED PERIL

Regarding Communism, it read:

"The more Jewish international Communism hopes to establish Soviet terror states, the more we realize the importance of a strong national defense."

The proclamation called Nazi Germany the strongest anti-Bolshevist bulwark. It said:

"We are aware of the Bolshevist world danger, and therefore welcome the co-operation of all opposing it. Victorious Communism would have to be handled most drastically."

"We Nazis intend to live in peace and quiet with our neighbors. It is not necessary for us to prove our security by any demonstrations. It is sufficient that we ourselves know it.

"We see in our army the protection for peaceful labor. And when we are forced to make sacrifices, then we will make them for our liberty and labor.

"This army is our most valued and proudest possession."

NO WAR ON CHURCH

The Hitler proclamation stated that the Nazis had no desire to fight Christianity, adding:

"But the National Socialist State will under no circumstances tolerate in any way 'round-about confessional politics; and on this let no one be deceived concerning the determination of the (Nazi) movement and the state."

Then Hitler warned:

"We have already fought clerical politics and run it out of the Reichstag (Parliament) after a long fight in which we had no government assistance but the other side had the advantage. But today we have this power of making our battle for these principles lighter.

"We will never carry on this battle against Christianity as such or against the two confessions." (The Roman Catholic Church and the Protestant Confessional Synod).

"But we will keep our policy clean of priests who missed their profession and who should have been politicians instead of clergymen."

In a speech to Congress on Jan. 8, 1918, President Wilson stated 14 points he believed necessary to a post-war settlement.

In brief, these were:

1—Open treaties reached openly, with international diplomacy conducted openly.

2—Fredom of the seas;

3—Free international trade;

4—Disarmament;

5—Impartial adjustment of colonial claims.

6—Evacuation of Russian territory;

7—Evacuation of Belgium;

8—Evacuation of French territory and restoration of Alsace-Lorraine to France.

9—Readjustment of the Italian frontiers according to nationalities.

10—Autonomous development for Austria and Hungary.

11—Evacuation of Rumania, Serbia and Montenegro, with establishment of security for the Balkan States.

12—Establishment of the sovereignty of Turkey along lines of nationality.

13—Establishment of an independent Poland.

14—Formation of a "general association of nations."

'LORD'S LAW' CHARGE FACES PROXY BRIDAL 'G-MAN'

Fall River, Sept 11—Herbert Mansfield, Jr., 21, who confessed he married a "proxy" bride who substituted for the girl he loved, will face charges of "conspiracy to violate the Lord's Law."

District Attorney William C. Crossley said Mansfield would be brought from Providence, R. I., to face that unexplained charge.

Just what is meant by "the Lord's law" is as much a mystery as the amazing love tangle wherein an unidentified girl is said to have impersonated Vesta Jean Isherwood, 17-year-old Nantucket school girl, in obtaining, at Seekonk, a marriage license issued to "Herbert Horace Mansfield and Vest Jean Isherwood."

A marriage ceremony is said to have been performed in the name of the Isherwood girl, whom Mansfield now admits was not his "bride."

Young Mansfield, a 24-year-old counterman in a Providence restaurant, says he does not know the name or the whereabouts the girl he declares "substituted" for the Isherwood girl in the Seekonk ceremony.

Crossley does not believe the "proxy bride" in the Great Nantucket Romance Mystery was "unknown" to her "proxy husband." The prosecutor said:

"I think he is trying to shield the girl who acted as his proxy-bride."

Meanwhile first steps were taken in Providence, R. I. to identify the girl who vanished from the jig-saw puzzle wedding scene as incredibly as she entered it.

District-Attorney Crossley says he has a confession, that Herbert has "told all," and that "all" is the tale of an unknown girl pledging by proxy the troth of Vesta Jean Isherwood.

Vesta Jean, who is quoted variously as having confirmed and denied knowledge of the substitute bride marrying Herb in her behalf, is also due for more questioning.

Alphonso Scatto, who now employs Mansfield as a counterman in his restaurant, is due for more questioning. And last, Mrs. Rose Scatto, Alphonso's spouse is due for more questioning.

Meanwhile Providence police, convinced that the "conspiracy"—if any—was hatched in Providence, have set the wheels of justice spinning, and have announced that they will trap the substitute bride.

KNOWS GIRL

They have indicated that they are satisfied Mansfield does know the girl he says he merely picked off the streets, the girl who obligingly took wedding vows in Vesta Jean's name, June 8.

He says he doesn't. Police don't, either. Mrs. Scatto was asked delicately if she had any suspicions. She didn't have.

Mabel Mathewson, East Greenwich Academy mate of Vesta Jean, is completely absolved of any possibility of having been the obliging maiden.

According to the tale released by District Attorney Crossley, Mansfield explained that when he was working in Nantucket, Vesta Jean and he first planned their wedding.

He allegedly related:

"I was forbidden to see Vesta. I did see her and meet her secretly.

"These meetings continued until I left Nantucket about February 10, 1935. We started writing to each other and in practically every letter discussed marriage.

"I gave her the key to my mail box at Nantucket, and she took from the box love letters which I wrote to her, addressed to myself to that box and marked on the envelope with a secret mark known only to her. Thus she got my letters.

"She went to East Greenwich Academy on February 28, 1935.

"When we were unsuccessful in these attempts to marry I suggested to her in one of our talks that we get married through the use of a substitute bride—with Vesta agreeing that after I had gone through a ceremony with another girl who was to use her name, she would become my wife in fact and in name.

"Seeking some girl who would assume Vesta's name and act as her substitute in a wedding ceremony, I borrowed a car and went cruising through Providence and Pawtucket and as far as Apponaug.

"In the latter place I met a strange girl, picked her up in the car and explained my proposition to her.

"I didn't then and I don't now know her name, her address or anything about her.

"When she indicated that she wouldn't do it, I told her that she would get in trouble with the authorities by conspiring with me. She then agreed to do it.

"By arrangements made then I met her the following afternoon on the street in Providence, took her to Al's lunch, where Mr. Scatto was waiting for us, and we filed marriage intentions.

"When we got back to Providence I left her at the corner where I met her, first making an appointment for 10 a. m. on the following Saturday morning.

"I told Vesta how I had filed the intentions in her name, using a substitute for her.

"On the following morning at 10 o'clock I again met the 'substitute' at the same Providence street corner as before. The same program was followed, this time the marriage ceremony being performed.

"I left her at the same place as soon as we returned to Providence, and I have made no effort to see her since.

"That night I went to the senior prom at her school. I wore a white rose, which by prearrangement with Vesta, was the signal that her marriage by proxy had been accomplished and which meant that from then on she was my wife. A red flower would have indicated failure.

"When I met her, after she had seen the white flower when I came in, she kissed me and told me endearingly that it was the happiest day of her life.

"That night, after the senior prom, she failed to meet me to go away with me, as we had planned. I never was able to learn why she backed out.

"In the letter she wrote me under date of June 3 she spoke of the possibility of leaving her dormitory on the night of the prom or on the following night.

"Under the agreement between Vesta and me, this was so that in event I had failed to marry through the substitute bride, she could go with me then and be married to me herself on the license procured by the use of the substitute."

JASSE ON TRIAL FOR ATTACK

Calling 14 witnesses, the Commonwealth today opened its case against Robert Jasse, former Revere pugilist, charged with assault with intent to murder Mayor James M. O'Brien of Revere on July 15.

The trial was begun before Judge Vincent Brogna in Suffolk Superior Court after two jurors had been excused on the ground they knew both parties to the case, and two other men had replaced them.

Jasse, whose case was continued a few days ago to enable him to get another attorney, when John M. Boyle withdrew from the defense, was represented by Boyle, who re-entered when the defendant could not obtain a substitute.

Assistant District Attorney Frederick T. Doyle is conducting the state's case.

British Officers Are Hosts At Tea on Cruiser

By BETTY ALDEN

ENGLISH SOCIETY is famous for its teas and many traveling Americans have been so taken by the custom of afternoon tea that they have sought to transplant it in New England . . . But it is not often that Bostonians have the opportunity to enjoy a spot of tiffin on English soil without going to the trouble of crossing the Atlantic.

This afternoon Vice-Admiral the Honorable Sir Matthew Best and the officers of His Majesty's cruiser York, flagship of the British fleet in western waters, returned the courtesies and hospitality being extended to them during their stay in Boston this week by entertaining at a reception and tea aboard the ship . . . Lady Best and her daughter, Miss Best, assisted in receiving the small company of guests . . . Officially, the ship is in mourning for the late Queen Astrid of the Belgians, which restricts the size and formality of all entertainments aboard the ship for some time.

KATHERINE WINTHROP

Among the prominent social leaders of Boston who enjoyed the hospitality of the British officers were Honorable and Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, Mrs. Hugh Bancroft and her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Bancroft, Jr., and her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Cox; Admiral and Mrs. William Sims with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Elting Elmore Morison (Anne Sims); Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stewart and Miss Elizabeth Stewart; Mrs. Frederick Winthrop and Miss Katherine Winthrop . . .

Also Mr. and Mrs. A. Winsor Weld, Mr. and Mrs. James Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. Chandler Hovey, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Codman, Mr. and Mrs. B. Nason Hamlin, Mr. and Mrs. Francis P. Hamlin and Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Cox, as well as Miss Eleanor Bassett . . .

Last evening the officers of the York were the dinner guests of Mrs. Paul D. Rust of Marblehead, preceding which they attended a reception with dancing given by the officers of the Boston Navy Yard . . . They ended the day at a dance at the Tedesco Country Club, for which Richard Ward, Eliot Ware, F. Ward Paine and Arthur Blood supervised the arrangements.

Some elaborate entertaining is in store for the Britishers when they arrive in Newport on Friday for a short stay . . . A red-letter event on their social program will be the tea dance Saturday afternoon, which will bring Britons and Americans together in the comradeship that is the foundation of the organization of the English Speaking Union, which is sponsoring the party . . . On Sunday evening Sir Matthew and Lady Best will be the dinner guests of General and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt at Beaulieu, their Newport estate . . .

Engagement Is Announced

MR. AND MRS. ARTHUR WILLIAM GREGORY of Hartford, Ct., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Janet Gregory, to Robert Weatherill Winchell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Winchell of West Newton . . .

Miss Gregory attended the Master's School in Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., and is a member of the Junior League . . . Her fiance was graduated in 1934 from Bowdoin College and is a member of Alpha Delta Phi fraternity . . . No date has been set for their wedding . . .

Before heading for the Navy Yard this afternoon quite a number of our first families attended the wedding in Leslie Lindsey Memorial Chapel of Anne Marshall Boos to Hugh Morton . . . Though the company assembled to witness the tying of the nuptial knot was composed mostly of relatives and intimate friends, you may be sure that the wedding of a daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Frederick Boos of Beacon street to a son of Judge and Mrs. James Madison Morton of Fall River, was one of the socially significant events of the early fall . . .

The comely bride wore a gown of soft ivory velvet trimmed with old family lace . . . Her tulle veil was fastened to a small lace cap bordered all round with a band of fine lace . . . She carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley . . .

Sister Attends as Maid of Honor

MISS MIMI BOOS was honor maid for her sister, wearing a frock of lawn green velvet with a brown velvet hat and an arm bouquet of golden yellow roses and gardenias . . .

Also in the bridal procession were Miss Sarah Morton, Mrs. Theodore Hexter Galland of Spokane, Washington; Miss Florence J. Cole of Concord, and Mrs. Kenneth Wade Thompson of New Haven, Ct. . . . They wore frocks of golden yellow velvet with brown hats and bouquets similar to the maid of honor's . . . At the reception at her home, Mrs. Boos received the guests gowned in a black chiffon dress with a large black hat . . .

Stafford Almy was the best man and the ushers included the Messrs. Brayton Morton, brother of the bridegroom; Herbert Farnsworth, his cousin; Stephen B. Hibbard of Pittsfield and Boston, and Joseph C. Harsch of Washington . . .

Mr. Morton and his bride will live on Beacon Hill, where he is to follow in the footsteps of his brilliant father and carve out his career as a lawyer . . . He already has a good educational background for his career, having followed his graduation from Williams with courses at Trinity College in England and Harvard Law School . . . His bride also studied abroad, in Paris, for a year, after her graduation from the Lee School and Miss May's here in Boston. She was presented in 1929-30.

Belknap-Judd Ceremony

OF CONSIDERABLE Boston interest is the wedding of William Ethelbert Belknap, 2d, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ernest Belknap of Beacon street, and The Shed, at Island Creek, Mass., to Miss Estelle Judd, daughter of Mrs. Edith Henley Judd of New York.

The ceremony was performed this afternoon at the home of the bride's mother on East Sixty-third street in New York. Mr. Robert Ernest Belknap, Jr., was his brother's best man.

Miss Judd attended the Todhunter School in New York and completed her education with four years of study and travel in Europe.

For the past few years she and her mother have lived in Paris and London. Mr. Belknap was graduated from Harvard College with the class of 1932. The newlymarried couple will spend the winter in Miami, Florida.

"Asylum," by William Seabrook (Harcourt, Brace & Co.).

This list is compiled from reports submitted by the Old Corner Bookstore, 50 Bromfield street, and the DeWolfe & Fiske Co., 2 Park street.

A NOVEL OF ACTION

"THE INQUISITOR," by Hugh Walpole, Doubleday, Doran.

This book is artistically out of proportion. It is too long. Mr. Walpole's material wears thin towards the end of the novel.

"The Inquisitor" is the last of the Cathedral series. "The Cathedral" and "Harmer John" preceded it.

Walpole's genius for character portrayal has ample scope for this last novel contains a hetreroganeous group of people.

There is Porteous, sportsman as well as rector, and a close follower of Christ in both fields. Christ to him is the captain of every team on which Porteous plays.

There is brilliant Lady Mary, pretty Penny Marlowe, shrill Mr. Romney, and the tempestuous Lampiton.

This book is a novel of action and not a little melodrama. There are murders, riots and mysteries. However, the value and enjoyment of the novel lies in the superb character drawings.

"THE BEACHCOMBER," by William McFee, Doubleday, Doran.

We have the hackneyed theme of a man who loves often but unwisely. But the handling of the theme is novel and proves interesting reading.

The plot concerns one Fred Nevile, a young captain of a passenger liner. His life is complicated with women.

He always felt that this one would be the real thing but it never was until Athalie came along.

Athalie was different but we won't spoil the story for you by revealing its contents. Read it for yourself.

This Is Life

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

I am not one to wander from my own fireside. Usually I don't. I never can quite understand why my fellow men and women like to spend their summers galumphing rapidly over the landscape, sleeping in a new bed every night, and trying to guess at the quality of the food in Aunt Hepzibah's tea-room and comfort station from the way the place looks on the outside.

And yet that is becoming the great American out-door sport.

Robert E. Rogers

But a few days ago I had to go up along the Maine coastline to make what is known by courtesy as an address to the fall meeting of the Maine Library Association.

The Missus went along, too, and the Daughter. The Missus does the driving and the Daughter punctuates the trip with the frequent, free, and pungent comments of American youth.

We made up our minds to do the whole thing in overnight cabins. None of us had ever been in one. We had heard of the luxury and ingenuity of the cabins of the South and West, but we wanted to see what New England has to offer, particularly Maine, the playground of the country, that takes in 400 millions of alien cash in a summer and thrives on it. The home of the guest house, the overnight cabin and the lobster stew.

The answer is that the overnight cabin business is one of infinite potentialities of profit, most of which is being thrown away by the lack of imagination, the lack of what might be called the "landlord" sense, the scrimping on the points which make the difference between good lodging and mediocre or even bad lodging, and—not to put it strongly—the downright meanness occasionally displayed.

Resign Self

In other words, many of the cabins we have been in are the sort that you will resign yourselves to suspiciously when you have driven as far as you think you ought to late some afternoon.

Only once have I seen a set of them for the sake of which you would drive an extra hour or two in order to make them for the night.

The overnight cabin and the room in the House-by-the-Side-of-the-Road have seriously damaged the hotel and inn business.

For one thing the "one dollar per night per person" has become almost universal, and even fairly elaborate lay-outs, inns with plenty of rooms and baths and garages, etc., find it a matter of course for passers-by to start back in alarm and chagrin at the mention of any price above the orthodox one dollar per a. per p.

And yet the accommodations the cabin can give—or at any rate does give in its skimping New England way—cannot compare with such things as hot baths on the premises and, above all, food on the premises when you badly need a late supper or an early start.

The chief trouble in the whole situation as I see it is that the Overnight Cabin was originally a cheap and hasty improvisation by people to whom it never would have occurred that there is such a thing as the art of the landlord.

These more or less elementary improvisations have persisted down the years. There must be a considerable amount of money in the racket. A man or woman with a string of cabins on the main road during the two tourists' months can't help making some good money. Even in a cool September, in a summer remarkable for its sudden ending on Labor Day, the cabins I have seen are still taking in a dozen customers a night.

The land never cost much originally, waste pasture or woodland; the buildings are of the most elementary and flimsy construction; service is all but non-existent; upkeep is limited to a little superficial cleaning and the daily laundry.

But at one place with a string of 10 or 12 cabins I judged from the registrar that in midseason the proprietor must be taking in not less than two hundred dollars a week without serving food.

And this at a fairly well known camp which lacks a good many of the things a tourist feels to be, if not necessary, at least highly desirable.

I shall add a few remarks to this anon, perhaps tomorrow.

BLOOD FROM THE DEAD

Postmortem Transfusions Succeed

By Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 11—Experiments with "canned" blood, a contribution of the dead to help the living, were being conducted today at the University of Illinois Research Hospital.

The "canning" process, used in human transfusion cases in Russia for five years, will be tried out here first on dogs, Dean David John Davis of the University Medical School said.

BLOOD IS 'CANNED'

Describing the technique, he said the blood of a healthy dog would be "canned" in glass containers.

Another dog would then be bled to the point where a transfusion would be required to sustain life. The first dog's blood would be injected into the living animal's veins.

If results are the same as those obtained by Dr. S. S. Judin, chief surgeon at the Sklifasnowsky Institute in Moscow, the weakened dog would regain his strength, Dean Davis said.

Hundreds of human lives have been saved in Russia through this innovation, Dean Davis declared.

Serious accident cases involving profuse bleeding are hurried to this one hospital.

Blood is taken only from bodies of persons who died suddenly, to avoid infection.

BLOOD SURVIVES DEATH

The "canning" is done within six or seven hours after death because red corpuscles of the blood remain alive long after death. Blood can be used for transfusions three or four weeks later, Dean Davis added.

Advantages of "canned" blood, the dean said were:

1—Speed. The blood is on hand for immediate use. Time is saved by eliminating the necessity of hunting a blood donor.

2—Safety. An autopsy on the body from which the blood is taken removes all hazard of transmission of disease.

3—Cost. Prices of blood required for each transfusion run from $15 to $50 and up. This item is eliminated by use of "canned" blood.

HOLLAND

MORE Shakespeare For Local Fans

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Just for variety, it might be plausible for Al H. Woods to revive some such masterpiece as "Getting Gertie's Garter," "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," or even "Tillie's Nightmare," and book it straight-way into a Boston theater.

And for variety (as revivals seldom click) it might do business. Honestly, the fall calendar is becoming a table d'hote of musical extravaganzas and Shakespeare.

George Holland

With "Othello" opening tomorrow night at the Plymouth, with "Macbeth" to follow at the same theater, with not a single straight non-Shakespearean play carded as yet for a Boston theater, and with "Jubilee," "Porgy and Bess" and "The Great Waltz," all musicals, slated to supplant the current musical shows on the ticket-brokers' slabs, what do you think today's news brings forth?

Simply and startlingly, it brings forth the item that some more Shakespeare, "Romeo and Juliet," starring Katharine Cornell, is the first announced booking for November.

Miss Cornell and her excellent company will open at the Shubert Theater on November 4, and the engagement will be for two weeks only.

As I remember, this column predicted so long ago as the past June that a rash of Shakespeare would erupt over the face of Boston this season. Not that the prediction was in the nature of a complaint, because, even giving utmost consideration to your Mons Hartz, Samuel Shipman, George S. Kaufmans and Elmer Rices of these latter decades, William Shakespeare was a pretty fair writer, too.

When the prediction was made, there were several other Shakespearean ventures sliding across the Broadway horizon, and among these were a John Barrymore and a Leslie Howard "Hamlet," a Geilgud che's a Londoner) "Hamlet," and a Lunt and Fontanne "Taming of the Shrew." Of these four projects, only two are destined to take form at this writing.

At that writing (June), the Lunt-Fontanne "Taming of the Shrew" was contemplated for Boston as a brushing-up stand before New York. The Leslie Howard "Hamlet" was an odd-on choice for a Boston break-into before Broadway. It is now (huzzahs) unlikely that either of these two brilliant enterprises will see Tremont or Boylston streets before the New Year.

Gladys Cooper and Philip Merivale, in "Othello" and "Macbeth," and Katharine Cornell, in "Romeo and Juliet," if blithely supported, should maintain the city's reputation for culture.

A Modern Troubadour

Bing Crosby, who sang his way to fame and fortune, stars with Joan Bennett in "Two for Tonight," which comes to the Metropolitan screen Friday.

More Color Films Are Planned

Los Angeles, Sept. 11—The cheerful prophecy that one day all pictures will be produced in color is borne out by the optimistic note brought back from London by Dr. Herbert Kalmus.

While there he arranged for the building of a plant to be largely financed by the Prudential Life, the company which holds the purse strings of the Alexander Korda Productions, prudential owns one-third. Kalmus one-half and the remaining few shares are in the hands of other stockholders.

Nine months will be necessary to complete the British studio. In the meantime, Korda's picture, "The King of the Jews" will have color equipment sent from America and Natalie Kalmus has been borrowed from Hollywood Technicolor as color director. Dr. Kalmus has further arranged with David Selznick to make "Little Lord Fauntleroy" in color, and with Merian Cooper for a coming color drama.

I don't suppose it's a secret that Josephine Hutchinson has been a little discouraged. She is ambitious and she wants to do big things.

Miss Hutchinson is not the type that should play gals-gals roles and apparently Warner Brothers are beginning to see the light, for Josephine will have the lead in "The Angel of Mercy," the story of Florence Nightingale.

Seven long months and Carole Lombard never faced a camera. There won't be seven months again, for Carole is being pared by several of the companies with ideas.

Paramount is particularly insistent that she forget all else and be teamed again with Fred MacMurray in "Recreation Car," by Clarence Buddington Kelland, an Arthur Hornblow production.

You may call "Recreation Car" "Florida Special," for all the action takes place on a train with a variety of characters—sort of a la "Grand Hotel."

Possibly the lady protested too much that she had no intention of making movies, but just between you and me and the gats post, Ina Claire is reported to have signed a five-year contract with Jesse Lasky to make pictures for him on his new United Artists contract.

Ray Goetz, who is very close to Lasky and who knows the theater as few people do, will direct the lovely Ina.

Chatter in Hollywood: Jack Oakie can stick right to his turtle neck sweaters, his ex-girl friend, Peggy Hopkins Joyce, won't be coming here for her role in "Collegiate." Peggy didn't think the lines given her were worthy of her talents so she sent her regrets to Para and said she was sorry but the part wasn't big enough.

Soo-oo, some pretty young thing with the Joyce look will probably play the part originally intended for Miss Hopkins.

Snapshots of Hollywood

The tiny sweater MARJORIE OELRICHS DUCHIN has been knitting is not for an expected arrival; It's to be presented to ANITA LOOS; NANCY CARROLL'S shadow at Reno, QUENTIN REYNOLDS; it's reported he will marry her soon; BEN HOLMES showered with congratulations from RKO because he marched to the altar with his one-time nurse, LEONA WILHELM.

The MARX SANDRICHES giving their blessing; HENRY WILLSON, no longer the beeg moment in PAULA STONE'S life, stepping out with PAT ELLIS; CHARLES CHAPLIN patronizing The Queen, the new English bar, with a party of friends.

MARGARET SULLAVAN and WILLIAM WYLER back from their trip, apparently as happy as can be; EDMUND LOWE entertaining with a small break-fast party; HARRY RICHMAN still taking HAZEL FORBES places. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Lookie!

It's Gracie "Juliet" Allen sighing for George "Romeo" Burns in their newest picture, "Here Comes Cookie," which opens tomorrow at the Paramount and Fenway.

Radio Fun Stars in New Hit

Tomorrow's new film program at the Paramount and Fenway offers George Burns and Gracie Allen nitwits of the networks, in their latest comedy antics, "Here Comes Cookie."

The same program also offers "The Gay Deception," with Francis Lederer, Frances Dee and Benita Hume in the principal roles.

The hilarious adventures of Burns and Allen, in another of those comic plots dear to the hearts of their ardent admirers, are set forth in "Here Comes Cookie." Betty Furness, George Barbier and Andrew Tombes add to the general merriment.

"The Gay Deception" sets forth the story of a hard-working stenographer who suddenly acquires a modest fortune, and immediately starts on a fling in the big city. Alan Mowbray, Lois Alberni, Lennox Pawle, Richard Carle and Ferdinand Gottschalk are featured in the cast.

Continuing its record-smashing career at the Keith Memorial, "Top Hat," latest of the musical comedies co-starring Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, continues for another week.

The fast-stepping partners who stand at the head of the Hollywood parade when it comes to comedy and dancing, are the principals in an engaging romance of London and the Lido. The film introduces "The Piccolino," newest of the Astaire-Rogers dance innovations. Tunes are by Irving Berlin, and include "Cheek to Cheek," "Isn't It a Lovely Day," and the "Piccolino."

Edward Everett Horton, Eric Rhodes, Helen Broderick and Eric Blore head the supporting cast in the gay musical romance.

Stan Kavanaugh, the royal juggler, joins the all-star stage show at the Keith-Boston tomorrow, where Sophie Tucker and Vincent Lopez are his partners in the spotlight.

Kavanaugh, whose juggling combines skill, comedy and art, was last seen in Boston during the Keith Jubilee celebration last February.

New films at the Washington Street Olympia include "Woman Wanted," with Joel McCrea and Maureen O'Sullivan, and "Silk Hat Kid," starring Lew Ayres and Mae Clarke.

Bowdoin's Bill

Boris Karloff stars in "The Black Room," new film attraction on the current Bowdoin Square program.

Lonely Moor

Philip Merivale opens at the Plymouth tomorrow night with Gladys Cooper in Crosby Gaige's production of Shakespeare's "Othello."

Music Notes

Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, famed for many seasons as an interpreter of the music of the noted Finnish composer, Jan Sibelius, opened a Sibelius Festival in Helsingfors last Friday, conducting the Stadtorchester.

The composer, now celebrating his 70th birthday year, was present, and requested that his tone poem, "Tapiola," be included on the program with his Seventh and Second symphonies.

From Finland the Boston conductor proceeds to Stockholm to conduct a concert on next Wednesday in the Swedish city, sailing the following day for America.

Upon his return the Boston Symphony will immediately go into rehearsal for the opening concerts of the season on October 11 and 12.

With the great influx of opera stars to Hollywood, the outstanding vocal coaches of the East have also journeyed to the movie center.

Walter Golde has just returned to New York following two months on the West Coast, where he not only conducted classes, but coached Richard Bonelli and Rose Bampton for their forthcoming operatic roles in the films.

On the Hollywood roster now there are Lawrence Tibbett, first from the opera stage to go into pictures; Grace Moore, engaged in another musical film; Gladys Swarthout, who has just completed "Rose of the Rancho;" Nelson Eddy, following his triumph in "Naughty Marietta" with another picture; Nino Martini, Helen Jepson, Mr. Bonelli and Miss Bampton. The veteran Schumann-Heink, once difficulties are straightened out, will also appear in the movies.

Amateurs Head Met Bill

With one of the most familiar phrases of the networks, "All right, all right," Major Bowes' amateurs of the air make their exit on Sunday nights.

But for the first time the public has made its own stars, and the talented boys and girls whose votes pile up, go from the studios of New York to the stages of the United States.

One of the prize-winning groups of Major Bowes' amateurs takes over the stage at the Metropolitan Friday.

The big news in Boston is that Paul Regan, a Medford boy, heads the parade. After the 'phone calls and votes came crowding in, Paul suddenly found himself hailed as one of the greatest impersonators in show business. There'll be more than a warm welcome for him in his home town.

Others featured on the Bowes' program are Mrs. Marguerite Ryan, the "amateur Mary Garden;" Lozier and Sloma, "pint-sized truck driver and machinist's apprentice;" the Stauffer Twins, who used to work in a department store; Sol Strasser, the "Polish Caruso;" Albert Hall, "the human piccolo;" Joe Beckler, the boilermaker; Adele Kaplan, schoolteacher; Adolphus Robinson, and Major Bowes' original "One Man Band."

Life Story of Mussolini:

DUCE RULES PEOPLE'S MIND WITH IRON HAND

By J. C. OESTREICHER

Foreign Editor, International News Service

(Copyright, 1935, International News Service)

Benito Mussolini once predicted within 50 years the entire world would be ruled by Fascist governments.

Today, some five years later, there is a government in Germany modeled to some extent after the Fascist state.

There is in Austria a semi-military rule that could be identified as Fascist save that its leaders consider their regime merely ad interim until time is ripe for monarchical restoration.

There is in Hungary a military government, headed by Admiral Nicholas Horthy.

Jugoslavia was under a military dictatorship prior to the assassination of King Alexander, but since that time the nation has slipped back into the hands of politicians.

But that is all, and as a result, the Fascist bloc of nations has failed to coalesce.

World-wide Fascism may be but 50 years distant, as Mussolini predicted, but thus far, except for scattered attempts here and there in Europe, the movement remains confined to Italy.

The reason for this may be that Mussolini, as first of the dictators, was first to realize dictatorship is a full time job.

A dictator rules almost entirely by virtue of national popularity. He must be a national hero—more, he must be a demigod.

Mussolini Rule Shuns All Errors

Moreover, he must not make a single mistake.

In the case of Mussolini, his rule has been singularly free of errors. The Matteotti Incident was his most serious crisis and that has been forgotten.

But even in this trying time, by moving with characteristic speed and vigor, Mussolini emerged victorious.

Mussolini likewise, with all his bids for foreign prestige and all the affronts to the powers, has never looked away from Rome.

Since his seizure of power he has never set foot off Italian soil.

It has been too important to his unbroken power and prestige that he remain at all times within sight and hearing of his people.

Il Duce, possessor of one of the shrewdest minds in Europe, has realized that he could not afford to risk national prestige in behalf of doubtful benefits abroad.

Italian Fascism today is deeply rooted. In his 13 years of rule, Mussolini has succeeded in bringing up an entirely new generation, who acknowledge nothing that is not Fascist who bow to no idols save the fasces.

To do this, extraordinary measures have been unnecessary. Mussolini launched them after the Matteotti affair by dissolving the opposition press.

In the ensuing years, he carried this farther.

His controls not only all newspapers in Italy but every conceivable means of communication.

The radio is operated by the government. Telephone and telegraph lines are controlled by the government. Magazines and publications are subject to censorship.

The result is Italian children born since the advent of Fascism know nothing but Fascism.

Thirteen years of unrelenting propaganda has all but eradicated the last glimmering trace of liberalism even in older minds.

There is always the possibility that Mussolini will make a major mistake. His Ethiopian campaign, some observers say, may prove to be his first—and last.

The results in such a case would be unpredictable. The chances are he could survive this one at least, and that Fascism is safe—until the incubated Fascists are old enough to think for themselves.

In any consideration of Fascism, it must be admitted frankly that before Mussolini, Italy was poorly-disciplined.

The condition of her exchequer and cities; di'storiness of her trains; wasteful practices of her industries; failure of her leaders to utilize resources, and the vacillating policies of government after government have always been subjects for criticism.

Since Mussolini, all these things have changed.

For a long while, it was customary to refer to Mussolini as the man who made Italian trains run on time.

Some zealous Fascisti used to resent this mundane summarization of Il Duce's achievements.

But since then it has been said that any man capable of restoring order to Italy's railroads—this feat involving as it did reorientation of the Italian psychology toward work and life—was in itself the savior of the nation.

Mussolini Time Carefully Gauged

His working day is a long one; his periods of relaxation brief.

Mussolini arises regularly at 7 a. m. Almost invariably a saddled horse is awaiting him. While in Rome, he rides in the spacious private park of the Palazzio Venezia.

When military affairs do not occupy most of his time, Mussolini usually finds space during the morning to read the newspapers. Many foreign publications are banned, but all nevertheless find their way into the Palazzio Venezia.

With even greater care he reads the papers of Fascist Italy.

In the afternoon Mussolini confers with party leaders and the few remaining members of the cabinet, and writes articles for the Popolo d'Italia.

In his younger days Mussolini enjoyed the pleasures of the table more than now.

Today he eats sparingly, drinks nothing but a moderate amount of native wine and allows himself few luxuries.

In addition to horseback riding, his chief recreations are automobiling and flying.

Mussolini takes no one into his confidence. The closest to him is his son-in-law, Count Galeazzo Ciano, who many say may be selected by Il Duce as his successor.

Certainly Fascism will have to have one. The Italy of 1935 is the hand-wrought creation of Benito Mussolini, pursuing a destiny mapped out by Mussolini alone.

He is risking a great deal in his aggression against Ethiopia, but he has made this promise to his people, and a dictator survives only so long as he can make promises and fulfill them.

TRAFFIC BOARD HEEDS 'FIXER' CALL

"THE TROUBLE FIXER"

Public Service Department, Boston Evening American.

This department has been installed as a public service for Boston Evening American readers. It will endeavor to solve problems and fix troubles dealing with city, state or public utility service. Requests must be specific and brief. No anonymous requests, nor matters of a purely private nature can be considered.

With its usual efficiency and prompt action, the Boston Traffic Commission reports adjustment of a complaint lying in its jurisdiction.

Commissioner William P. Hickey reports his department has acted on the complaint by W. C. of Columbia road, Dorchester, that gas odors were escaping from the base of a police officer's spot light pole maintained by the traffic commission at Upham's Corner.

The condition has been investigated, and the department has plugged the duct pipe in the base of the pole with oakum and cement.

In answer to a complaint by C. W. N. of Faneuil about the piling of weeds near his garage and the claim this action was a fire hazard, Samuel J. Pope deputy chief in charge of fire prevention, of the Boston Fire Department, reports following investigation by his department:

"An investigation discloses that there is no cause for complaint as but a small amount of garden brush is being kept a safe distance from any building for the purpose of covering flower beds for the winter.

"The conditions do not create a fire menace."

BLACKMER'S PRICE

Paid $4,466,784 to Be Oil Exile

By Associated Press

Paris, Sept. 11—Henry M. Blackmer, who came to France rather than testify to United States senators on the oil scandals of the Harding administration, says he has "no intention" of returning to the United States.

"My home is here," said the tight-lipped "man without a country."

"My friends are here and I have lived happily in Paris for 11 years. I have no intention of ever returning to America."

H. M. Blackmer

Blackmer, once known as one of Denver's most lavish spenders, lives there quietly, entrenched behind the refusal of the French government to extradite him on a charge of evasion of taxes.

THE PRICE HE PAID

He will not talk about the past—about his connection with the Continental Trading Company deal which sent Albert B. Fall, Harding's secretary of the interior, to jail.

Blackmer considers his affairs in America settled by the $3,670,-194 he paid the government to settle the controversy over his income taxes, by the $80,000 with which he purged himself of contempt before the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia and by the $736,000 he turned over to the Midwest Oil Company—the concern he once headed.

The man financiers once called a "child of the gods" lives alone.

AT HIS CLUBS

He has made his home on the Rue De Presbourg, just off the Etoile. His apartment holds a large library of books in English and French.

On clear days Blackmer plays golf at one o fthe exclusive clubs in the suburbs of Paris.

In the evenings he may be found at his club—the exclusive and cosmopolitan Travelers, just a few steps from his door. There he has friends of a dozen nationalities.

A Gloucester man, who requests that his name be withheld, wins the $25 first prize this week in the Boston American news tip contest.

LOVE BLIND

By Hazel Livingston

CHAPTER 37

The chauffeur had been right, the WAS crazy! What would Margot say? What would Ma say? What would ANYONE say of a girl who let silly pride stand in the way of two weeks' — no, a month's pay!—for they really have to pay you two weeks in advance when they fire you, and here she'd allowed herself to be eased out without a dime . . .

She was ready to drop when the gates were open at last, and she could get on the boat, go to bed.

But the comfortable, wide berth couldn't rest her, nor the waves rock her to sleep. She was too tired, too worried about what tomorrow would bring.

There was just one thing she was sure of—she wouldn't wire Ma for money until all else failed. First, she'd go to the Seattle office of the Hesley Steamship Co., introduce herself and see if she could get a job, or if they could help her get a job somewhere else. And, if they wouldn't, she'd make the rounds of the employment agencies, ask for anything—housework, factory work—anything at all.

Futile Visit

And then, before she felt quite brave enough to carry it off with an air, it was 9:30 and she was in the elevator going up to the "Seattle office" she'd written to so often.

And all too soon she was coming down again.

Mr. McMurtrie, the general manager, had been kind. He appreciated her calling. He was always glad to meet the personnel from other offices. He'd be glad to let her know when there was an opening, and he couldn't suggest anything else.

Now she'd have to try the employment agencies. In a little while, when she felt a little better . . .

A man stopped her. She raised troubled, half-glazed eyes, took another look, and gasped, "Oh, STEPHEN BENNET! How did YOU get here!"

In her relief at seeing a familiar face, a friend among all these strangers, she could have kissed him! She clung to his hand. Then she almost died of embarrassment—she'd called him STEPHEN Bennet!

But he didn't seem to notice. He was as excited and pleased at finding her. "What are YOU doing here? Why, I thought—"

"And I thought you were in San Francisco! Oh I'm so GLAD to see you, to see someone I know. I'm in an awful pickle—I—"

"But why aren't you at the lake?"

"Oh! Oh, I got fired. I'll tell you about it—if we could just go somewhere and sit down for a minute. But you haven't told me why YOU'RE here! You haven't been transferred again?"

"Oh, no. Just vacation. I thought I'd come home—this is home to me, you know. The hotel's just around the corner; we'll go over there and have breakfast; Mary, I was never so glad to see anyone in my life!"

Mary Tells All

So she told him—not sparing herself, not getting back a thing. It sounded kind of funny, telling it. She laughed a little, and he did, too, but his face grew dark and angry when she told him how she'd been sent away without a dollar of pay.

"For a girl who's all business, and never gives a man a chance —not to mention a bit of encouragement—you get yourself into more trouble—"

"I know. I don't know how I do it, but I just do. I was just sick about that affair with Milt Holden—"

"You needn't be. I saw him the day before I left and he looks fine. He's getting married.

"He's—WHAT?"

"Getting married. A widow, I think he said."

"Oh, I'm so GLAD! Now I can breathe again. Oh, I'm the biggest fool! I'm the biggest fool in the world—"

"You're the sweetest girl in the world."

She felt her eyes filling. Her chin trembled. It was because she'd been through so much, and the first kind word . . .

"Anything more, sir?"

"No—yes! Bring us some more coffee."

"But we've really finished."

"Oh, no, we haven't. I'm going to keep you right here until everything's settled, Mary. I'm not going to lose you again. I lost you twice, and got you back and this time it's for keeps."

Color burned in her cheeks. She looked down at the table cloth, dark, thick lashes veiling her telltale eyes.

"Isn't—isn't Mrs. Samson getting along all right?"

"You know I'm not talking about a job."

"Then I—"

"Mary, if you don't know that I've been in love with you for pretty near a year, then you ARE the biggest fool in the world!"

Never Indifferent

"Oh, Stephen—NO!"

"Oh, Mary—YES!"

Her eyes began to dance, the dimple to tremble in her cheek.

"You don't really mean that. You can't. Why, you've always been so indifferent, you've made me so MAD—"

I? Indifferent!"

"You were! You were, too!"

"You mean you were."

"Well, I was because you were—

"What could I do? You've been in love, or engaged or something ever since I set eyes on you. What chance did I have?"

The waiter said: "Your coffee, sir. Anything more, sir?"

"No, I think that'll be all . . . Mary, let's have a vacation together. Let's start NOW. We'll get the license and then we'll—"

"Oh, no, not today—" Her mind flew to her clothes, the pretty unused clothes already packed in the trunk at the dock.

She opened her purse, hastily powdered her nose.

"I look a fright. I've been so unset. I don't see how I . . . well, I suppose I could clean up and . . . Stephen, do you really want me? You're not being sorry for me because I'm a rotten stenographer and am stranded and everything—"

"Mary—"

"Stephen. Not here! There are too many people!"

"Come on, we'll go to where there aren't too many people. Oh Mary, Mary—to think I've got you at last! And just an hour ago . . . It's almost too good to be true. We'll go out to my mother's and . . . say, hadn't you better wire your folks? Will they—think it's all right?"

"Oh, yes. They'll like it. My mother sort of wanted me to marry a business man, but I—"

He grinned. "Go on, and finish. You didn't want to, is that it?"

"No, I just didn't think I would. Stephen, there's no one over there by the telephone booths. Do you think that you could—"

So he took her in his arms and kissed her, just as she'd dreamed that some day he would.

And Ma got the wire that evening just as she was putting the biscuits into the oven.

All floury, as she was, she rushed across flower beds, hurdling melons and late tomatoes, waving the telegram. "Henry!—never mind the chicken feed now! Henry—Mary's given up that silly job she had with the physiologist or psychologist or whatever it is and, oh, Henry, she's marrying Mr. Bennet! I'm so glad I can't keep from crying! Look! DIDN'T I ALWAYS TELL YOU SO?"

THE END

Much Ado About Nothing

By RUBY AYRES

WE ALL do it, and most of us love doing it, so it is no use for the superior to say scornfully "I don't!" because in this rule I do not believe there are any exceptions.

We do it in different ways —sometimes over big matters, sometimes over minute matters, but we all have our own private manner of making much ado about something which is of so little importance that it is absurd.

There are women who will grizzle because a man knocks his pipe out over a freshly-brushed hearth; women who will grizzle because a man goes to sleep immediately after dinner; women who will grizzle because a son is late for meals, or because a daughter will bring too many friends to the house.

How foolish it all is! Surely there are enough big troubles and tragedies in life without peering through a microscope in order to find the little ones.

What does it matter if tobacco ash is split on the hearth? Brooms are made to sweep up such things! What does it matter if a girl brings too many friends to the house? Surely it is what a home is for, and isn't it better than allowing the girl to run about outside at all hours of the day and night?

I should like to say to myself and to all worrying women — "Don't be silly! How would you like it if that tiresome pipe always lay on the mantel-shelf and its owner never came home at all? And how would you feel if a daughter disliked her home, and took good care to keep her friends a mile away from it?"

There is always the reverse side of the picture, and so sometimes it is a good thing to turn one's worries, real and imaginary, inside out, and see what there is on the other side.

Don't forget that perhaps to some women the little things which worry us so much would seem to be blessings.

CAMPING TRIP MENUS

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB.

LATE SUMMER is a fine time for hiking trips and crackling campfires in the open.

The days are still comfortably warm, and the nights just chill enough for a brisk fire.

A perfect time this to take that long planned camping trip, or to bundle the family in the car for a steak roast in the country. In the back of your car put the camper's compact bundle of utensils—an old coffee pot, an iron grill or frying pan, a kettle, and some toasting forks or long skewers.

And be sure you take plenty of good, hearty food along, too—steaks chops, bacon, ears of corn, potatoes, tomatoes, celery, pickles, olives, cheese, crackers, buns, and fruit—for city appetites are apt to grow by leaps and bounds in the country. So arm yourself with a few of these good recipes for rugged camp-fire cooking, and strike out into the wilds.

Hot Sandwiches
Sliced Tomatoes
Fresh Cucumber Pickle
Stuffed Spanish Olives
Melon

Baked Potatoes
Corn-on-the-Cob
Sweet Mustard Pickle
Celery
Coffee

HOT MUSTARD AND CHEESE SANDWICHES

For each sandwich spread two slices of bread with a thin layer of mustard. On one slice of bread arrange a slice of American brick cheese, and two strips of bacon that have been broiled until crisp over hot coals. Arrange slices of stuffed Spanish olives between slices of bacon and top with second slice of bread. Place sandwich on grill over hot coals and toast on both sides. If a toasting rack is available, place sandwich in it as this makes the turning of the sandwich for toasting easier.

BACON AND OLIVE ROLLS

Roll a thin strip of bacon around a stuffed Spanish olive. Place on the end of a sharp stick or toasting fork and broil over the camp fire. Serve two or three of these in hot rolls (heat rolls over camp fire also.)

HOT FRANKFURTER SANDWICHES

At home, remove the skins from frankfurters and grind. Pack in a jar or box lined with waxed paper for the camp fire supper. Place 3 or 4 strips of bacon in a skillet and cook over a camp fire, grill until crisp. Break bacon into small pieces, add the ground frankfurters and fry until slightly browned. Slice sandwich buns and spread first with a small amount of butter, then with mustard and a thin layer of India relish. Place a generous layer of the hot frankfurters between each bun. Slices of onion may be placed between sandwich, if desired.

CHIPPED BEEF, BACON AND TOMATO SANDWICH

Notch edges of bacon to prevent curling and fry in skillet over grill. Remove bacon and fry chipped beef, which has been separated, in bacon fat until crisp. (If there is too much bacon fat, remove part of it before frying chipped beef.) For each sandwich, toast two slices of bread on one side over the grill, using a toasting rack if available. Spread the untoasted sides with a thin layer of butter, then with mustard. On the untoasted side of one slice, place 2 strips of bacon and enough chipped beef to cover. Arrange thin slices of tomato over this, and top with a second slice of toast.

Smart Buffet Party

EVERYONE ENJOYS A SWEDISH BUFFET PARTY

A JOLLY, easy way of entertaining a crowd!

A Swedish buffet party!

Your friends will love the gaiety of it; they'll adore browsing 'round a table of hors d'oeuvres, in the Swedish fashion, and making a whole meal of these tasty foods.

Have the red and gray, or green and gray of Swedish pottery for your color scheme. Center your table with a bright pottery bowl of flowers. Arrange a tempting assortment of appetizers, buffet fashion, with piles of plates, napkins, knives and forks. Have card tables, covered with gay cloths, to which guests can carry their plates.

The hors d'oeuvres? Choose from this list: Stuffed celery, tray of cheeses, platters of cold meats—ham, tongue, corned beef, chicken—pickled beets, shrimp salad, sliced or pickled cucumbers, cole slaw, radishes, stuffed eggs. And, of course, no "smorgasbord" (as the Swedish people call a table of appetizers) is complete without Swedish rye crisp, pumpernickel and rye bread.

To be really Scandinavian, there should also be a fish salad among your appetizers. Here's a tasty one:

Swedish Salad

1 cup cooked halibut
4 minced anchovies
½ cup diced cooked carrots
½ cup cooked green peas
½ cup diced asparagus, fresh cooked or canned
1 tablespoon vinegar
2 teaspoons onion juice
½ teaspoon salt
1-3 teaspoon pepper
Mayonnaise

Combine cooked halibut with anchovies, prepared vegetables and seasonings; and moisten thoroughly with mayonnaise. Chill, and serve in a bowl with lettuce.

At one end of your table, in a chafing dish, or buffet food warmer, have a hot dish—Ham a la King, perhaps, in a ring of rice. After the main course bring in coffee and a substantial dessert, something like Swedish apple cake, Swedish pancakes or peach cobbler with hard sauce.

Braid As You Knit

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

By ANNICE BRINK

THIS IS one time when you can do two things at one time—and do both well! For as you knit, you braid, when making this two-piece knitted suit. The trig braid motif keeps in step with the nattiness of the military mode. Further interest is added by the ribbed sections of both skirt and sweater, which make for more slenderness and grace. You may have knitting directions for this brand-new knit fashion by writing to Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, Boston Evening American, and inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

CHAPTER 16

"Not much, only I was saying about Achilles and his heel and you were saying women were heels. Well, my Julie is a heel—Carston's heel—the one spot in Carston's machine vulnerable enough for us to aim at. What Achilles' heel was to Achilles, Julie is to Carston and, by Jupiter, Quinn, through Julie we'll take King Carston to the cleaners for fair."

Bradford grabbed the phone and began dialing another number. Quinn, quizzically scratching his head, muttered half to himself:

"Julie — Carston —Achilles Heel—oh, hell!"

Tony's place would have been a vaguely familiar sight to the average American. A small bar in front and in a rear room, several small tables covered with red and white checkered cloths. It wouldn't take much imagination to picture it as a typical speakeasy of pre-repeal days gone straight.

But its front door, still containing the now-useless peephole, swung wide open to all comers, and in walked Bill Bradford.

Nodding a hello to Tony behind the bar, he entered two sidecars as he walked to the dining-room and took a seat at a small table facing the door. Tony brought the drinks, placed one in front of the young reporter and set the other before the vacant chair.

"Mees Julie, she's a comin' een soon, heh?" Tony asked.

"Yep, she'll be along any minute."

As he spoke Julie entered the front door.

"Hi newsboy," she greeted Bill. "Now what's your big trouble? What have you done this time, bitten your city editor and contracted ptomaine?"

"I haven't done anything," Bill replied with mock meekness.

"Well, what's all the hurry then to see me at this wierd time of day?"

"Here's a sidecar, Julie. Climb aboard for a ride," and Bill pushed the drink toward her.

"Order another, Bill, I'll take a round trip." Then becoming serious: "Bill, that place is giving me the creeps, the whoops and the jumps."

Bill called to Tony for two more sidecars.

"Bill, if you only knew how I hate Carston, and how I loathe working for him!"

"Say, you're really developing a case of jitters, aren't you?" queried Bradford as the waiter brought up two more cocktails. Handing one to Julie, Bill admonished:

"Darling, I know only two cures for the jitters—drinking and screaming. Drink up, as I don't want to be made conspicuous."

As Julie finished her cocktail, she sighed.

"Bill, why can't somebody stop him?"

"Maybe somebody can."

"Who?"

"That nice Mister Bradford."

Julie smiled.

"Bill, it takes more than just a few editorials and a news item to stop Alex Carston. It takes something a little bigger than even a good newspaperman."

"That's just it, Julie. I am more than a newspaperman, now. I've taken a little job on the side."

Douriy. Julie passed off Bill's statement.

"What are you doing now, door to door canvassing with brushes?"

"Julie, dear, I'm serious. Can you keep a secret?"

"You ought to know. Bill, that that's one thing I learned from Carston."

"Guess that's right, kid. Well, here it is. For the past six months I've been working for the Treasury Department," he whispered.

"The Treasury Department?" asked Julie incredulously.

"Yes, under the Intelligence Unit of the Internal Revenue Department."

"You—you have? But why, Bill? I don't see the point."

"Here it is in a nutshell, Julie. Because I know the Treasury Department is the only branch that can put Carston away where he belongs. I joined because any guy that knows as much about Carston as I do and doesn't do something about it hasn't enough red blood in his veins to give a transfusion to a mouse."

A look of genuine fright—almost panic—swept into Julie's countenance:

"Bill! Suppose he finds out. They'll kill you!"

"When he finds out, darling, he won't worry about me. He'll be too busy doing other things—among them twenty years for income tax evasion."

"But how can you get the evidence?"

"With your help, darling."

"No, Bill, No. I can't. I'm—I'm afraid."

"He'll never know until it's too late for him, dearest."

"Bill, you don't know Carston like I do. He's uncanny."

"Well, what am I supposed to be —somebody's idiot boy?"

"Oh, Bill, you don't understand. I want to help, but I also want to live, and I don't want you or Mrs. Bradford—a live Mrs. Bradford."

Health

Don't Ignore High Blood Pressure

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

DESPITE THE great reduction in typhoid fever, tuberculosis and other infectious diseases, most persons who have passed middle age are not living as long as might be expected.

This must be due to the increase in chronic disorders among those of adult life.

High blood pressure is a cause or a result of many chronic disorders of the human body and is a hindrance to long life. Many persons go along, quite unaware that they have high blood pressure, until some serious disturbance occurs. Others discover the trouble only because of a casual health examination.

If all persons were subjected to periodic health examinations there is no doubt that many chronic diseases would be recognized early. Then treatment would begin immediately and much suffering would be avoided.

CONSULT DOCTOR

If high blood pressure has occurred in your family it would be a wise move to consult with your doctor. Make sure that you are not bordering on high blood pressure or that you are not already afflicted with this disturbance. When high blood pressure is recognized before it has had a chance to exert its damaging influence upon the body, beneficial treatment can be inaugurated for the disease causing it.

High blood pressure may be the result of some hereditary factor. In many instances it can be traced to fatigue or overwork of the nervous system. At times it is the result of overeating and overweight. Alcohol, tobacco, infections, and faulty diet are other contributory factors.

Neglect of high blood pressure is dangerous. Its continuance will harm the heart and kidneys. These are vital organs and if they are weakened or impaired in functions, serious body changes may result.

A person afflicted with high blood pressure should place himself in the hands of a competent physician. He will outline a method of rest and exercise suitable for the particular case. The doctor will prescribe such necessary medicine and treatment to prevent serious complications.

HIGH EMOTIONAL TYPE

Usually the sufferer from high blood pressure is of the highly emotional type. It may be that he is worried because of business matters or family difficulties. These factors are detrimental to normal health and not infrequently have elevated blood pressure among the effects. In such cases rest and relaxation are imperative.

Since most cases of high blood pressure are associated with overweight, it is advisable that the diet be guided in an effort to reduce. This should be gradual, as too rapid loss of weight is dangerous and only places an additional strain on the heart and kidneys.

In addition, infections of the teeth, nasal sinuses and other structures warrant medical attention. Absorption of toxins or poisons from infected areas may lead to an increase of the blood pressure.

Never neglect high blood pressure. With proper care and attention it need not be a handicap to good health.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES

A. G. F., Q—What should a boy of 15, 5 feet 7 inches tall weigh? 2—Will correcting constipation rid a person of pimples?

A—He should weigh about 122 pounds. This is about the average weight for one of this age and height as determined by examination of a large number of persons. A few pounds above or below the average is a matter of little or no significance. 2—Yes, will prove most helpful.

N. T. D. Q—My father has high blood pressure and hardening of the arteries. Are these two conditions apt to accompany each other. Careful diet and general care will reunsly bring about increased comfort and relief. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

ADVICE on LOVE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX and NELL BRINKLEY

The Vexing Question of Nationality

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Her father disapproves because we are of different nationalities, though we are both Gentiles.

For a time I was able to see her at her home, but her parents objected so much that now we have to meet on the sly.

When her father sees me he looks the other way, so he won't have to speak. She says that when she is of age she will see me whether her parents object or not. Would you advise me to speak to her father concerning his disapproval? What can there be against my nationality?

PUZZLED.

As your nationality has given the richest heritage to art which the world has known, there can be no objection to it from the point of view of a cultured person.

As I have often said in this column, nothing is more ill-advised than for parents to bring their old-world prejudices to these shores and martyrize their children on account of them. When they come to America, they should know they are coming to a melting pot.

My advice to you is to wait patiently for your girl. Sorry I couldn't print all of your letter, because it's too long.

AND NOW HER MOTHER OBJECTS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

For three years my girl and I went "steady" and never a peep from her mother or any member of her family. But now all of them have come down on me like a thousand tons of brick, and won't let the girl see me or let me come to the house.

We love each other too much for that, and she finds plenty of opportunities for telling a good fib or two, and meeting me on the sly. But after three years of open and above-board companionship, this seems too bad. What do you suggest?

JOHN.

You haven't given me the reason for the family taboo, as far as you're concerned, my dear John, or whether there was any reason. Did they think you were too young, or that matters were getting too serious and that you were not in the position to support a wife?

Whatever the reason may have been, sneaking is not good for the character. Why not ask the girl's family what it's all about, if you don't know?

This will also answer Mack.

QUITE A PROBLEM HERE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Recently I met a man a good deal younger than I am. He is 25 and I am 37. He knows I have been divorced and have two sons. He tells me my reputation is not to go, and we are both very much in love.

But there is one thing I don't like about him—he is inclined to drink too much. He has too many friends and just can't say "no," although it isn't a habit with him. I'd like to make something out of him—put him on the right road. Do you think it would be safe to marry him? N. S.

A great many women have had that same dream about reforming men who "just can't say no." But the dream, in most cases, has developed into a nightmare. Men who can't say "no" seldom reform, because they are weak at bottom.

As for the difference in your ages, 12 years is a good deal of a risk when the man is only 25. Why not just go on being friends and trying to influence him in that way.

Just a Song at Twilight

By Nell Brinkley

MUSIC is the language of love—and neither radio nor phonograph can give it the sweetness which pours from an instrument when tender fingers touch it.

In this picture Nell Brinkley shows two hearts meeting in the stirring notes of a love song—with the kind permission of no one but Cupid.

Miss Brinkley's picture holds a hint of yesterday. But the charm of music is as potent now as when harpsichords were the popular parlor instrument.

Every person should be able to play, for the pleasure of expressing himself (or herself)—even though he never becomes an expert . . . There can be more beauty in a love song picked out on a piano with one finger than in all the glories of a symphony.

Autumn Beauty Ritual

Whisks Away Signs of Age

By Juliet Shelby

DO YOU happen to have a very special beauty problem—one that isn't taken care of by the daily beauty ritual?

If, for instance, you are troubled with broken or inflamed veins, puffy eyes and crows' feet, you will want a very specialized treatment for this sort of thing.

With characteristic ingenuity, a famous skin scientist has worked out a treatment for broken veins that is as perfect as anything we've ever found for this condition.

The most flattering powder and make-up in the world isn't going to help you—not if small broken capillaries are discernible under the skin. And eyes which are puffy with dark sunken hollows—often the first telltale sign of age—have no place in any woman's quest for loveliness.

If you are troubled with these conditions, you must give them very special care. First of all, you must avoid any harsh treatment or hard patting. Never apply ice, or any strong bleaches or astringents over those parts.

Many times when a woman is described as "beautiful" it means that she has a clear, faultless skin. If you are serious about acquiring a fine-grained, soft-textured complexion, you'll have to give yourself emergency treatment—if broken or inflamed veins have already appeared.

The treatment to which we refer today may be obtained at moderate cost at a Boston salon. Here you will find that the problem of what-to-do-for puffy eyes and crows' feet together with ruptured veins, has been ably taken care of.

While you relax with pads of anti-wrinkle lotion on your eyes (it smells of honey and delicious herbs) deft fingers will be giving you a massage in a manner that deserves applause.

First of all, there will be a medicated cream especially made for this type of dry, sensitive skin. And where broken veins have appeared, a reining lotion is patted on.

So, if you've long been troubled with these difficulties and have almost despaired of ever correcting it, there's still hope for you.

To learn the name of the Boston salon which gives these special treatments for broken veins, puffy eyes and crows' feet, call Juliet Shelby, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Adele Garrison's Love Serial

Given in Marriage

CHAPTER 414

HARRY UNDERWOOD'S query as to how long it would take me to get the women and children of the farm house "into padded cells," did not deceive me by its apparent flippancy.

With Dicky's arrival, all the men of the household, save Jim, who was in attendance upon Lee Chow, would be in the basement with the Chinese prisoners, engaged in the task if inducing them to speak and tell the truth concerning the attempt to kill Dicky, and the connection of Lee Chow with the attempted murder.

It was not the attack upon Dicky that most concerned the interrogators of the prisoners. I knew that, and also knew that if that were the only issue at stake, careless, good-natured Dicky would as soon let the men go as take the trouble to find out whether or not they were guilty of the attempted killing.

But Lee Chow's life and reason were the stake for which our men were playing. The high-born Chinese friend of Hugh Grantland has given me a message to take to Hugh which was either the essence of absurdity and sinister cunning or of tragedy, and I could not for the life of me determine which hypothesis to choose.

A PLOT OF HIS ENEMIES

He had said that he did not know whether he himself had instigated the attack while temporarily insane, or whether these hatchet men belonging to his greatest enemy had pretended to have his backing in their murderous errand.

It was in order to determine the truth of this that Hugh Grantland was risking serious illness, if not his life, by going to the basement while still near collapse from his wound, and taking the part in the inquiry which only he could fill because of his knowledge of the Chinese language. I knew that the men of our household were giving him the backing of a stone wall in their inexorable dealings with the Chinese malefactors.

As I neared the kitchen, I heard Katie in high-pitched expostulation with the small boys.

"You no mean you hoongry again?" she cried. "You had beg looncheh, and den shoost before you start in car I gif you beg pieces bread, butter and jam. Und now you say you hoongry again."

"But we are," Junior affirmed, "just awful hungry," and Roderick bolstered the statement, with a plea meant to be pathetic. "Aw! Katie, go on, give us something. We're starving."

"I ought to gif you big box on ear. Dot's vot you ought to get," she grumbled, but I saw that she was automatically reaching for the bread knife as she spoke, and the small boys' faces were brightening with anticipation. Not that they were dolorous, or even doubtful of the ultimate success of their plea. Katie notoriously spoils both of them, but she likes to grumble a bit while she does it, and "prolong the agony" as much as she can. It is a bit of drama for both her and the small boys, and all three of them play their roles with zest.

KATIE PRESENTS A PROBLEM

I was sorry to "ruin the suspense," but I had no choice, and spoke briskly.

"Let me help you cut that bread, Katie," I said, "and have you anything in the oven or on top of the stove that will spoil if you leave it for an hour?"

"No. Stove all shut off," she answered, and I saw her eyes widening in anticipation.

"What I goin' do about dinner?" she asked, but was moving briskly to do my bidding as she spoke.

"I don't know," I said. "I'll explain all about everything when we get up to the nursery."

"To the nursery—" she began, in amazement, then as she caught my eye, she clapped her hand ludicrously over her mouth.

"Me, I ask no more foolish questions," she said. "I feex dees looncheh before eat can shoomp tru hoop. You kin take boys cop staire sef you like."

Mrs. Culbertson on Bridge

The Value of Post-Mortems

The other day I saw a player carelessly win a trick when making contract depended on allowing the left-hand opponent to hold the lead and prevent the dangerous hand from leading through until too late.

This slip threw away a laydown game—but East made an even more criminally thoughtless play and tossed the game right back.

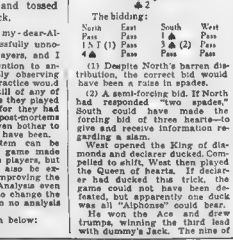
This "after-you-my-dear-Alphonse" act was blissfully unnoticed by all four players, and I transferred my attention to another game, mentally observing that no amount of practice would ever improve the skill of any of these four as long as they played among themselves, for they had so far banished post-mortems that they did not even bother to analyze what might have been.

Now, a post-mortem can be very annoying in a game made up of argumentative players, but it can and should also be extremely helpful in improving the standard of play. Analysis even when it is too late to change the result is better than no analysis at all.

The hand is given below:

North, Dealer.

North-South vulnerable



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 N.T (1)	Pass	4 ♠ (2)	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) Despite North's barren distribution, the correct bid would have been a raise in spades.

(2) A semi-forcing bid. If North had responded "two spades," South could have made the forcing bid of three hearts—to give and receive information regarding a slam.

West opened the King of diamonds and declarer ducked. Compelled to shift, West then played the Queen of hearts. If declarer had ducked this trick, the game could not have been defeated, but apparently one duck was all "Alphonse" could bear.

He won the Ace and drew trumps, winning the third lead with dummy's Jack. The nine of hearts lead qualified East as "Gaston." All he had to do was step up with the King and return a diamond, setting up a trick in that suit before declarer could establish his fourth heart for a discard. East, however, was a player by rule, and the rule here was "second hand low."

West won the Jack, and, still unable to lead another diamond, shifted to a club. Dummy's Ace won the trick. A third heart lead was won by East, who returned a diamond, but it was too late.

Declarer took the Ace, discarded dummy's diamond on the ten of hearts, and trumped his only remaining loser—the Jack of diamonds—in dummy.

If South had ducked the first heart lead East could not have obtained the lead until the fourth heart was established.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

Question A few weeks ago you sent my aunt the Hauser Elimination Diet and Da Cunha diet. She has already lost considerable weight by following it, but I find that it is really too complicated for me to follow at present. I work in an office and find that I would be unable to follow the diet in all its detail. Now what I would like to know is this—have you a diet that is safe and easy to follow I am only about twelve pounds overweight, so I do not think I would need a very complicated one.

BETH A., Arlington.

Answer Yes, I have just the diet for you. It is the new Hollywood reducing diet and it is guaranteed to take off three pounds a week. It has been called the "lazy-man's-diet" because it is so easy. You eat one full meal a day and save calories at lunch and breakfast. It is the easiest diet I know of for the business girl. You should be able to lose about twelve pounds in a month. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope if you care for this diet.

Division of Wedding Gifts

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I wonder if you will be as kind as to help me out in a little matter concerning a young married couple. They have been married one year and now they have separated.

They have received a lot of wedding gifts and shower gifts. Now she is demanding that he give them all to her.

They have been living with his mother and have not used the majority of the shower gifts nor have they used some of the wedding gifts. Will you please tell me what is the right thing to do? C.

Wedding presents are always sent to the bride, in her name, and, if they are marked, they are marked with her initials, either the initials of her maiden name, or the initials of her name-to-be.

And all of this is not only because of the sentimental reason, but because of the legal reason—the wedding presents, according to law, are the bride's personal property.

A curving seam rides over the hip and is lost in the rippling flare of the skirt. The saddle-shoulder line decreases shoulder breadth, and is an excellent one for the heavier figure to adopt.

This frock demands the richness of crepe, satin or velvet. Complete, Diagrammed Marian Martin Sew Chart included.

"Substance" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday.

The Golden Text is: "Ye had compassion of me in my bonds, and took joyfully the spoiling of your goods, knowing in yourselves that ye have in Heaven a better and an enduring substance" (Hebrews 10:34).

Lost Girl Directs Her "Recovery"

Brockton, Sept. 11—When 7-year-old Antonia Feretti of Stoughton heard 120 other missing children at Brockton Fair sobbing and calling for their absent parents, she took matters into her own hands.

Quietly and without arousing anyone's suspicions, she hurried from the fair and made her way to the police headquarters, a mile away.

Here, she sought Captain James E. Laya, and, in most capable fashion, identified herself and asked him to telephone her home.

"Nice to se syou, P'a," Antonia told her father, matter-of-factly, when he appeared later to take her home.

Piano Genius Hailed

Bach and Beethoven Her Playmates

LOIS JEANNE WILSON

Only Seven and She Plays Bach

PRELUDES AND SONATAS FUN TO 7-YEAR-OLD GIRL

Boston has its own Ruth Slenczynski, child piano prodigy, in the person of Lois Jeanne Wilson, 7, of Jamaica Plain.

Lois is a member of the Forest Hills Community Orchestra and ripples off Beethoven sonatas, Bach preludes and Haydn andantes as if she were playing scales.

Lois, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Wilson, 235 Wachusett street, Jamaica Plain, has been taking piano lessons one year.

This little brown-eyed, curly-headed girl takes the studies of theory and harmony very much for granted. She thinks they're much more fun than simple readin' ritin' and 'rithmetic.

Bach is this little sophisticate's favorite composer.

The tiny miss's only teacher has been her "Aunt Emma," Miss Emma Treadwell.

Auntie very modestly refuses to term her niece a genius, but she does admit "she is a very remarkable child."

And what child isn't remarkable who won't be enticed away from the piano, not even with the promise of a nickel for an ice cream cone.

Miss Wilson obliged the reporter by playing the allegretto movement from Beethoven's "Seventh Symphony."

The short chubby legs barely reached the pedal, but the rendition that came forth was remarkable. The interpretive feeling would do an adult credit.

All of which proves that it doesn't necessarily take the shores of Poland to produce a child-genius.

6 Ships Face Tieup By Radio Strike

A suspect was taken into custody and released after questioning.

Worm Turns—Into Court Fine

Plymouth, Sept. 11—For many years, it has been variously reported from numerous sources that the worm would turn!

Today it turned.

It turned up in Plymouth court, accompanied by 2199 relatives!

It turned out to be a "bloodworm," against the digging up of which there is a town law—if the worm is used for commercial purposes.

Six Chelsea men, who took turns at Humarock beach, Marshfield, turning up 2200 worms to sell at 25 cents a dozen for New York fishermen's bait, turned up with the worms, and, turning to them, the court said:

"Five dollars fine!"

The six who paid are Edgar, William and Alonzo Wanser, John Cerolan, Hugh McCullough and Harry Bennett.

Princeton's Dean Laments College Football

Dean Christian Gauss of Princeton University has unpinned his hair in a current article on college football, which finds the game in its most mischievous era, when students of both sexes import their drinking stimulants into the stadiums and guzzle their teams to victory in a gallant, selfless souse.

Austen Lake

The Dean deplores gala football crowds as perfect setting for drunken exhibitionists, wherein adult lushes impersonate curly-wolves, do limber-legged lurches and strew their unconscious carcasses face down in the game's afterglow until swept out by the sanitary crew.

This is franker than most of the contemporary football writings, in which such forty-niners as Alonzo Stagg, Fielding Yost and Pop Warner moralize and reminisce on the old barbaric day in a manner that suggests they dipped their fingers in their eggnog and wrote their essays in a hammock.

Outfoxing the Barbarians

DEAN GAUSS POINTS TO the football coach as one who exploits the enthusiasm and sufferings of the young for profit, and finds that the practice of hiring shaggy yokels of early mental age prevails among the colleges today more than it did in the dark ages of the game.

He wonders, "Will the football bubble burst?"

Though many of the colleges have tidied up their athletic houses, and in some cases discontinued the athletic scholarship, including the football laundry privilege and such patronage jobs, they maintain huge athletic plants and cater to public trade.

This is not the fault of the athletic executives who are hired to promote profits and employ coaches who are pretty smart in the head. No victories, no publicity, no balanced budget, no jobs for the executives.

Hypocrisy lies largely in the lap of the college trustees, the presidents and the posts of faculty command.

By reducing the pay-load capacities of their stadiums to admit only the student enrollment and limited guests, the mardi-gras aspect would soon disappear, public curiosity would diminish, the ping would be pulled on sport page publicity, the income torrent would fall away to a trickle, alumni contacts would fade, minor sports would expire or return to intramural go-as-you-please, as is the case at Mass. Tech.

College Heads Flinch

FEW MAJOR COLLEGE HEADS would care to pioneer in such a shotgun cure, lest an outraged alumni cause them to be college presidents no longer and because, in any case, the shirt and pants of phys-ed upkeep must be made to meet.

As it is even such colleges as have scoured their eligibility rules and merely leave their campus gates open suggestively with a prayer that a beefy tackle or a bull-necked fullback may wander in unawares, cannot be certain of their purity.

Alumni clubs spotted around the land still underwrite tuitions for local lemmes and freight them to their alma maters with all expenses paid.

I would not call for any confessions, merely asking the boys to consent sportingly to be it when tagged.

Thus Dean Gauss did not touch, even tactfully, upon the many excellent freshmen who came to Princeton when Fritz Crisler arrived to reorganize the football department, and which gave him 27 sophomores good enough to make the varsity in his second year.

Not being an accessory to this coincidence, the university was piously grateful for so lavish an answer to its prayers.

The Old Order Changeth

THE FOOTBALL COACH is usually one who screams in his sleep and gnaws the lining from his lips. He knows that if his boys flop against Siwash on Dads' Day and turn up nothing better than a tie against Subway U. in the big traditional game, he is apt to be jerked loose from his job.

We are not reading much about Notre Dame or the Rockne system these days, though a few years ago the newspaper glory that rewarded its players brought the best kids arunning to South Bend.

The papers were full of it. The people wanted to read about it, and the ink-stained slaves of the press gave them what they wanted.

These things move in cycles. N. Y. U. had its delusions of grandeur under Chick Meehan when it bagged the best schoolboys in the East and set them up in princely luxury, dolled up its teams in lipstick colors and hired the Yankee Stadium.

The experience produced nothing but bunions, and N. Y. U. has gone back to parlor games with the neighbors' children.

University of Penn used to hire its athletes from an academic employment agency named "Doc" Tucker, which delivered the bodies and was paid by the pound.

Its standing army was paid off in big game tickets and scalped them on the ramps. But that passed, too, and Penn today lives in the odor of sanctity.

Drunks Have Lost Their Old Stuff

FOOTBALL, LIKE THE DOMESTIC CAT, cures its own ills by eating the herbs of disillusionment.

Harvard had its P. D. Hasselton and its era of high blood pressure. B. C. had Cavanaugh of lamented memory. Rutgers had its Foster Sanford, and so forth.

The taste of success always turns stale, and even rich men yearn to be barefoot boys again.

Even the football drinkers, since repeal, have tapered down to light defensive sips, sniffs and sips, where the prohibition rum pots hi' their cracks a bolt, sock and jolt.

Moreover, they were putting down some pretty brutal nourishment in that old barbarian day when standard brands were sheep dip and nickle polish and football fans brought theirs in Mason jars so they might spill it down their ears and thus quicken the dose.

One sort of regrets repeal, too. It is fun to be sore about something!

Giants Win Two; Gain On Leaders

Pittsburgh, Sept. 11 (US)—The batting slumps of Mel Ott and Gus Mancuso exploded here to blast the New York Giants back into the National League pennant with a double victory over the Pirates, 4 to 3, and 4 to 2.

Mel Ott

Both slumps ended in the second game to produce three runs in the ninth and victory that enabled the Giants to pick up a half game on both the Cards and Cubs.

Ott singled in the ninth to score Terry, and Mancuso fired another single to tally Jackson and Ott with the winning runs.

Allyn Stout's excellent relief hurling aided the Giant triumph in the first game. He relieved Castleman in the sixth, struck out four and forced the Pirates to hit into double plays twice. He yielded only one hit.

(Pictures From International News Photograph Service)

"He may have fooled me once, but never again," roars George. To prove his point he shows Ed "Strangler" Lewis just what he is going to do to Danno's irish whip when the two clash for the world wrestling championship at Fenway Park tonight.

The racing commission's 3½ per cent allowance amounted to $8366.11.

Wood-Grant All Even In Match

By Associated Press

Forest Hills, N. Colliding before a capacity crowd of 14,000 people the two net wizards divided the first two sets in their three out of five set match

Wood won the first set 6—4, outmaneuvering his 135-pound adversary. Wood maintained fine pace and length on his classic ground strokes.

In the second set it was Wood who wavered and the "mighty mite" swept through his defense to earn a 6—4 verdict.

Harry L. Ames, Quincy, Mass., organizer for the Common Laborers Union, directed the pickets. The company said none of its men was in the line but the protest was aimed at its open shop policy.

RIVALS OF YESTERYEAR PREPARE FOR TONIGHT'S FOE

CHAMP Favorite AT 10-9

30,000 WATCH TITLE GO

By Jack Conway

Ed Don George will try to equal Strangler Lewis' feat of winning the world heavyweight wrestling championship three times when he opposes youthful Dan O'Mahoney in a finish bout, best two falls out of three, at a show to be staged by Paul Bowser at Fenway Park tonight.

George first climbed to the championship heights when he pinned Gus Sonnenberg in Los Angeles. He later lost his crown to Lewis, only to regain it from Henri DeGlane after the latter had upset the Strangler.

O'Mahoney is a 10-to-9 favorite to win tonight.

George is still smarting under the defeat he received from O'Mahoney at a Christmas Basket Fund show at Braves Field last July. Don insists he was handed a raw deal by Referee Jimmy Braddock.

George twice knocked O'Mahoney through the ropes. After the Irishman was battered through the ropes for the second time, Braddock started to toll off the count. A wrestler must be back in action inside of 20 seconds.

George claims Braddock counted O'Mahoney out. The boxing boss says he only completed the count of "19" when O'Mahoney started through the ropes. He asserts he never counted "20."

SMITH REFEREE

Braddock will not be the third man in the ring tonight. Instead, Sam Smith, one of the old line wrestling referees, will have charge of festivities.

Smith is acceptable to George and O'Mahoney. Each admits Sam knows his business.

If neither wrestler scores a fall within an hour, the match will be decided by one fall under American Wrestling Association rules.

It is expected that a crowd of 30,000 fans will jam Fenway Park to witness the tussle. There is an advance sale of $16,000, and the last-minute rush for tickets is expected to send the gate receipts soaring past the $40,000 mark.

Champion and challenger are both fit for the test. O'Mahoney motored to Boston from Worcester today in the company of Jack McGrath, his manager, and Dick Daviscourt and "Farmer" George McLeod, who have headed his list of sparring partners.

The 22-year-old Celt was in a cheerful mood. He has packed on some additional weight and now scales 224 pounds. He looked in splendid physical condition and was confident he would leave the ring as champion tonight.

LEWIS SECOND

If O'Mahoney loses it will be a severe blow to him, as his great ambition is to return to his native village of Ballydehob, West Cork, Ireland, as heavyweight champion.

Lewis originally planned to return home following his recent victory over George, but was persuaded by Paul Bowser to remain here for the return bout when Governor Curley declared he thought Danno and Don should meet again.

Strangler Lewis will act as George's chief second tonight. The Strangler hasn't got any brief for Danno and is anxious that the title remain in the country.

"You never know when one of these foreign champions is going to return home and stay there," declared Lewis today. "George is an American, and will always do his wrestling in this country."

Lewis will also appear in the semifinal with Dick Daviscourt as an opponent.

By Associated Press

The Country Club, Cleveland, Sept. 11—Two of the outstanding favorites in the upper half, Ross (Sandy) Somerville of Canada and Albert (Scotty) Campbell of Seattle, were knocked out of the United States amateur golf championship today in the third round upsets.

Somerville fell before Walter Emery, Oklahoma City, in a 19-hole duel, while Eddie Held, Jamesburg, N. J., whipped Campbell, one up, with a sub-par blast.

Harry Givan, long-hitting Seattle star, led the way into the fourth round by trouncing John H. Nies, Boston, 4 and 3.

Givan who advanced to the same bracket last year before being knocked out, played par golf after the first hole.

Extra Hole Match

Somerville and Emery finished the regulation 18 holes all square and went into an overtime tussle.

Campbell, locked in a par cracking duel withheld, lost the 14th and McCarthy gave Munger a battle but his failure to play well on the short holes proved costly and the Dallas youth emerged with a 2 and 1 decision. The Virginian was out one down as he took the 15th but drove into the rough on the next losing the hole and the match.

Held, finishing one up on Campbell with a 70, two under par to Scotty's 71, registered a hair raising victory. The former public links star came home in 34, the best incoming nine of the tournament

Held's 25-foot putt for a birdie on the short 14th and a chip shot that he sank for another birdie on the 15th enabled him to withstand Campbell's rally. Scotty, after holing a niblick for an eagle on No. 16, squared the match on the 17th, where Held was in the woods. Campbell put his second into a trap and lost the 18th and the match to Eddie's par four.

MIDDIE BACKS Picked for Opener

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 11 (INS)—From its use in practice this week, a Navy backfield made up of Dick Pratt at quarter, Tommy King and Shed Schmidt at the halves and Joe Evans at fullback, seems to have the call for the early games at least and is likely to start against William and Mary on the 28th.

Pratt and King are veterans of two years regularity. Schmidt seems able to take the place of All-American Buzz Borries as a runner, passer and receiver of passes. And Evans, a tough blocker and defensive player, was understudy for two years to Bill Clark, the Navy's great punting fullback.

Little's Driver Keeps Him in Tourney

Lawson Little probably can outdrive any man in golfdom. Usually it is an asset but this time his tee shot ended up in a sand trap at the 417-yard 15th hole of the Country Club in Cleveland, O., and Little, national amateur champion from Los Angeles, Cal., lost a stroke to par with a five. But he recovered nicely and shot sub-par golf the rest of the way to eliminate his "hot" first-round opponent, Rufus King, 19-year-old Denverite.

McKenney Extols McNamara

Best Opening Day Scrimmage in Decade at B. C.

By Walter Kiley

Reactions and recollections following on the heels of the opening football scrimmage of the year at Boston College.

Two and one-half solid hours of intensive play . . . without letup . . . hard tackling . . . savage blocking . . . good and bad running, passing and punting . . . with every one of a squad of 70 candidates getting his chance.

In all the finest and most impressive first day scrimmage in ten years . . . leaving the impression with both coaches and some two to three hundred interested spectators that "Dinny Mac" has the makings of a team well worth watching.

Aftermaths:

HEAD COACH McNAMARA—"Entirely satisfactory . . . rarred work at times but to be expected so early in the year . . . Constant drilling in order."

FORMER HEAD COACH JOE McKENNEY — "Boston College far ahead of a similar period any time during the past ten years . . . McNamara accomplishing wonders . . . and producing a well drilled, thoroughly schooled squad which shows every indication of making a name for itself."

"DOC" FLEMING, coach at High School of Commerce—"The Eagles showing a dash and spirit which augur well for their success . . . Some of the newcomers looking so immense that McNamara will have his troubles cutting squad to workable limits."

JOHN P. CURLEY, athletic director — "McNamara's contagious enthusiasm and unquestioned knowledge of the game just beginning to show . . . Highly satisfactory . . . Begins to look like a great year."

WALTER KILEY — "Boston College showing the great advantages of spring practice . . . squad far advanced . . . naturally coming up with signal mix-ups and occasional failures to carry out assignments properly . . . which with further scrimmage sessions and signal drills will be eliminated as the opening game with St. Anselm's nears . . . outlook for future highly optimistic."

KISSEL HURT

One hundred and fifty minutes of intensive contact . . . with only minor bruises to one or two . . . conclusive proof that the Eagles are superbly conditioned.

James Kissel of Nashua . . . protege of Pete Cheanulevich, former Eagles' star back . . . injured knee suffered Monday putting him on crutches . . . to be out for week.

Attilio Ferdenzi of Ashland the outstanding ball carrier of the scrimmage session . . . his hard runnings, twistings and squirmings piling up big yardage for the A team.

Backs like Al Tottilini, Tom Guinea, Tom Bryan, Tom Brennan, Tony De Natale, Henry Chiarini, Pete Shannon, Walter Lapsisha and Oliver La Ronda showing midseason form . . . Tackles Ted Cain, Dan Dominick, Carew Wayman, and John Janusus gladdening the hearts of Line Coach Harry Downes.

Bill "Pepper Box" Ormsby, end coach, grinning from ear to ear at the wing play of Ed Furbush, Bob Cash, Jim Cahill, John Kozlowski and John Morris . . . Al Pazenny, Neil Owens, Ray Perreault, Joe Keaney, Ben Gambino and Paul Sweeney doing a workmanlike job at the guards . . . Center Vin Keough, with extra weight put on this summer, good on offense and particularly dangerous on defense.

Lateral passes liberally sprinkled through the plays . . . and squad showing training in being in position to take laterals either in front or behind line.

NIGHTS-BEFORE

Alumni Field in the best condition of 20 years . . . thanks to Danny Collins, superintendent . . . who tore the old turf to pieces and replanted . . . the new thick catch of imported turf, with a fine newly installed drainage system, being all that could be desired.

Big plans on for every home game this year . . . with Charlie Fitzgerald, Latin School coach and Bill McKenney, Joe's brother, heading a committee which will offer grand nights before for the St. Anselm's and Michigan State home games.

Boston College still a bit worried over the site of the Fordham-B. C. game, scheduled for the Polo Grounds in New York on Oct 5 . . . providing the unexpected happens and the Giants enter the World Series, the teams will be without a Gotham field and may hap be forced to play at Newton.

Frank Maloney officially installed as freshman coach . . . taking over reins at opening practice on Thursday . . . scrimmages scheduled for varsity on Thursday and Saturday afternoons . . . Dr. Ben Godvin supervising physical examinations with a 100 per cent passing.

Bahram Wins Sweeps Race

By Associated Press

Doncaster, Eng., Sept. 11—The Aga Khan's unbeaten colt, Bahram, today completed his sweep of England's three-year-old fixtures by annexing the St. Leger at a mile, six furlongs, 132 yards.

Sir Matthew McAlpine's Solar Ray was second and Lord Glanely's Buckleigh third.

By his victory the great son of Blandford became the 14th colt in British turf history to win all three major classics for three-year-olds—the two thousand guineas, Derby and St. Leger.

The St. Leger, oldest of the three, first was run in 1778. Today's running was the 159th of its long history.

Bahram won by five lengths with Solar Ray beating Buckleigh by three. A field of eight started.

The winner started at the record low St. Leger odds of 4 to 11. Solar Ray was 100 to 6 and Buckleigh 25 to 1.

13 Anti-Superstitious Golfers Issue Defy to Jinx

By Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 11—Thirteen men today anticipated a Friday, the 13th, golf tournament amply provided with black cat and other luck charms—all bad.

They are members of the Anti-Superstitious Club, revelers in salt spilling. Nothing improves their humors like a chance to make a good, big mirror over into a lot of little mirrors.

Day after tomorrow, at 3:13 p. m., they are going to a "thirteen-some" at the Arrowhead Country Club, parading to the first tee under 13 flags and ladders, tried and proven to produce the vilest luck, said Nathaniel Leverone, president.

Before each man makes his first drive, caddies will lead black cats across the fairway—if the cats aren't too scared. At succeeding tees, they will light cigarettes three to a match, and at the thirteenth, each player will drive his ball through a mirror.

M'GUIRK Faces Stiff TASK

MUST BUILD NEW LINE

By Will Connell

They hew to the line these days at Malden, where Warren McGuirk is working overtime to fashion a winner.

Early forecasts, and the home folks' general opinion, would give Malden a title contender. It is difficult to agree with this, after surveying the squad and schedule.

Coach McGuirk must hew to several lines, to find the best group for the top seven, but without one veteran he has a job that should powder his hair by journey's end.

True, the backfield picture is brighter than last year, and if the line hits good form soon there is basis for confidence. For McGuirk is ranked by rival coaches as one of the greatest line builders in captivity, and even without veterans he will have a smart, aggressive frontier by midseason.

THAT SCHEDULE

Trouble is that midseason is five heart-breaking games away, and the damage may be done the record before the stretch contests are reached. Wakefield comes along, a week from Saturday.

Recall its outstanding record in opening games the past few years and you'll see how Malden will be doing very well indeed to win.

Then are lined up, like so many scalp hunting Indians to Malden running the gantlet, these nine: Somerville, Haverhill, Melrose, Manchester, Central, Arlington, Lynn Classical, Brockton, Everett and Medford.

Captain Jim Fitzgerald and Charley O'Rourke are alternate quarterbacks. Both are returning the two pilots will be a big help if neither is hurt. Anthony Volpe at left half is a newcomer. Al Steed at right half was a sub in '34, and Pete Cignette, veteran fullback, fill out the backfield.

SYSTEM

Carmen Tedesco is quarterback; Norman Clough, left halfback; Charley Hanifan brother to Freddy who starred for Malden, and Al Spadafore, right halfback, and Dexter Schaffner, fullback. Sundry other candidates are close on the above boys' heels, so that there won't be any slackening for the front runners.

This year the first squad, coached by Charley McGuirk and Gerry Maloney, includes 44 boys. The second squad, taught by Charley McGeough and Bob Blair, counts 35 members, and seven-game schedule of its own.

Formerly only 33 were on the varsity, and the seconds were forced to put on enemy offenses for the benefit of the first squad. This year the fourth eleven of the varsity will present the various attacks while the second squad builds seasoned players without interruption. The policy will pay dividends in another year.

Mat Results

New York—Gino Garibaldi, Italy, threw Floyd Marshall, Oklahoma. Frank Procopio, Poland, defeated Harry Fiskiel, Philadelphia. Mike Romano, Italy, tossed Marshall Blackstock, Iowa. Abe Kashey, Chicago, defeated John Swoboda, Poland.

Camden, N. J.—Charley Fisher, 172, Columbus, Ohio, defeated Leo Wallack, 170, Los Angeles, one fall.

BEATEN AGAIN IN NATIONALS

By Bill Grimes

Despite the fact that many outstanding stars fell by the wayside during the first and second rounds of the national amateur championship at Cleveland, there is still far too much top-notch talent in the field to predict the winner.

Our own Joe Lynch, Blue Hill, disposed of a real golfer when he eliminated Bobby Grant, Wethersfield, Ct. . . . Apparently, Joe has Bobby's number in championship competition, for this was the third consecutive time he has taken the former New England amateur champion over the jumps in titular events . . .

Lynch had been experiencing trouble controlling his shots at Cleveland, but against Grant he "boomed" them off the tees and through the fairways for such distance that the gallery started to compare his long game with that of Lawson Little . . . In the event that Lynch weathers today's matches, he will be tough to beat.

Johnny Nies drew a worthy opponent for today in Harry Givan, the long hitter from Seattle . . . Givan is far better known nationally than Nies, but it will be to the advantage of the Pacific Coast star not to underestimate the United Shoe player's ability . . . There's not a gamer player in the field than Johnny Nies, who is never licked until the final putt has lodged itself in the cup . . .

But for his ideal competitive temperament, Rod Brown, Jr., would have bowed out of the championship in the second round, for the Country Club product was four down to O'Hara Watts, a young Texan, going to the sixth hole . . . Rod never blinked an eye and finally, after squaring the match at the 17th, won at the home hole.

Unless some unknown youngster flatters him, Lawson Little about a romp into the quarter finals . . . Speaking of youngsters, Willie is still in the running . . . Willie Turness, the Holy Cross sophomore, is in the upper half of the four-quarter, with H. Chandler Egan, George Voigt and "Spec" Goldman, wh woas runner-up to Little last year . . .

In the event that Joe Lynch and Rod Brown get through today they will meet in the fifth round tomorrow morning . . .

Carl Treat, perhaps the best greenskeeper in New England, is open for a proposition . . . Treat was at Woodland for many years but he was let out at such a late date that it was impossible for him to get a new berth . . .

MELILLO, SIMMONS BOTH FIRED AS 'BUSHERS'

Mr. Boston Returns To His Desk

By Jack Conway

THE GUEST writers did such fine pinch-hitting for me while I was on my vacation that I should let them carry on indefinitely. They were that good.

Mr. Boston

Readers of this column have told me they liked the efforts of the guest writers. They furnished new ideas which were presented in an interesting and entertaining manner.

Next year I shall make my vacation longer, now that I have so many capable guest writers.

I am very strong for each and every one of them.

CARROLL DINNER

DAN Carroll will try to laugh off 50 years when he is tendered a "Half Century Dinner" at the Motel Statler tonight. I think if anybody can laugh off 50 years it is large Dan.

With the passing of the years, Dan has not lost any of his zest for living. He still gets a great kick out of the good things of life, and may always be found in a ringside pew when anything of importance is happening in the boxing game.

I think if you could give Dan another Jim Maloney or a second Dick Finnegan he would consider it a perfect birthday. Dan has always got particular delight from being associated with a first-class boxer.

When Maloney was at his peak, Carroll used to spend his end of the purse tossing parties to his friends. He got his satisfaction out of managing a boxer with national standing.

I'll be seeing you at the Statler tonight, and then on to Fenway Park to see Danno and Don in their return battle.

PICKS LOUIS

HARRY Kelley, who used to train Jack Sharkey, Dick Finnegan, Jim Maloney and other famous fighting men, was a visitor.

He told me Jerry LaBella of East Boston, former New England amateur flyweight champion, has been winning steadily as a bantamweight in professional bouts on the Coast.

"I am managing LaBella," said Kelley, "and I think he is going places in the ring game."

"Who will win the Louis-Baer bout?" I asked.

"I like Louis," said Kelley.

"Baer is going down hill, and it is a question whether he will be able to get into as good condition for Louis as he was in when he knocked out Max Schmeling and Primo Carnera.

"Max was in poor condition for Jimmy Braddock, which explains why he lost. Baer tired after a few rounds, and could not get any fire into his attack.

"If Baer delayed the Louis bout until next year and spent six or eight months in the woods, he might come back to win.

"I don't think he has given himself time enough in which to build back the vitality he lost playing night life.

"Louis has youth. He has the old fire one possesses when punching his way to a championship. Dempsey, Tunney, Sharkey and the rest of the champions had it on the way to the title.

"The 'Brown Bomber' is also a short puncher. He will get inside of Baer's looping swings. If Max doesn't knock Louis out inside of three rounds, he will take a terrific licking."

ANCIL Hoffman has written me to the effect Baer is taking his training seriously and that he will be at his best when he opposes Louis.

"Max is really working," declares Ancil. "His hands are all right, while he can step 12 rounds at this stage of his training without tiring.

"I regret I cannot attend Dan Carroll's dinner. I have to remain on the job at Baer's camp. Tell Dan I shall celebrate with him next year.

"My birthday comes on September 11. Max and Buddy send birthday greetings to Dan."

RANDOM SHOTS

Ray Case says he is sending Jack Doyle against Dick Madden at the Arena on September 20 in the hope of building up the former as a card for the Garden . . . Madden has started training at Jerry Buckley's Gym for his meeting with Doyle . . . Doyle didn't show any real fighting form against Buddy Baer in New York but has hopes of doing better with more ring work.

I do not believe the Doyle-Madden bout will injure the Lou Brouillard-Al McCoy match, which will be staged by the Goodwin Club at the Garden on September 24. The Brouillard-McCoy tussle is a natural and should furnish a stirring battle.

REFUSED To QUIT AND BECAME STARS

By Joe Cashman

A word of advice to the collegians and sandlotters who are engaged in morning workouts at the Fens these days in the hope of gaining an entrance to pro diamond ranks.

If you should feel that you're failing to make a favorable impression, don't become discouraged and give up the fight.

Many of the game's greatest stars scaled the heights after being curtly informed by experienced judges that they were wasting their own and baseball's time by trying to advance in the national pastime.

Maybe, during the current Red Sox-White Sox engagement you've heard Oscar "Skee" Melillo and Al Simmons calling each other "oil can."

Whether you have or have not, the pair exchange that greeting almost every time they pass.

It's not an attempt at friendly "riding."

'CANS' CANNED

Melillo, greatest of defensive second-sackers, and Simmons, erstwhile American League slugging king, are merely calling one another what each was termed when he started his pro career.

They broke in together with Milwaukee back in 1921. "Skee" was a kid outfielder from Chicago semi-pro ranks. Al was Milwaukee's sandlot outfield pride. They showed up at the same time and were paired as "roomies."

It was a happy room they occupied for a few weeks. Both were hitting and fielding like fiends. Or so they believed.

"This league is a cinch," they agreed.

Until one day the manager walked in ordered them to vacate their quarters to make room for a pair of real ball players.

"What are we and where do we go?" asked 'Skee and Al.

"You're the rustiest pair of oil cans I've ever seen, and you're going so far away from here as I can send you, unless you get smart and quit trying to play ball," the pilot replied.

Neither rookie would quit. So both were sent on their way.

$50,000

"I was sent far enough," Melillo recalls. "It took me four days and as many nights to reach the Canadian town where I was shipped.

"Al was chased to a section of the Dakotas where few white men ever visited before.

"Maybe I wasn't so hot, but Al was as good a hitter then as he's ever been since. And, brother, that means he was plenty good, even if he didn't look it with his foot in the 'bucket.'

Fortunately for Milwaukee, the manager who rated Melillo and Simmons "oil cans" had the cash tied to him, and "Skee" and Al were recalled from their respective wildernesses.

In 1924, Milwaukee sold Simmons to the Athletics for $50,000, and the next season it sold Melillo to the Browns for a similar sum.

Sox Can Make Third Place Today; Braves Drop Tenth Straight

By Joe Cashman

Our Red Sox have a chance this p. m. to move into third place, which was four games away and apparently lost to them when they dropped a doubleheader to the Indians on Saturday last.

The Croninmen will turn the trick providing they can make it four in a row over the White Sox back of "Dusty" Rhodes, and the Yankees succeed in making it five straight over Cleveland.

It would appear that Robert Moses Grove can be too good for his own good.

When he's bandcuffing the opposition, his mates seem to gain a false sense of security and forget to make any runs for him.

Let him be a bit generous with safeties, on the other hand, and his supporting cast pull him through.

"Lefty" was less effective than he'd been for several weeks as he finally gained victory No. 17 after four futile attempts.

He was found for ten hits, including a triple and double, but managed to whip the White Sox, 4-3, in the Tuesday tilt, when his mates made twice as many runs in eight innings as they'd scored during his previous frames on the hill.

"Babe" Dahlgren was of great assistance to "Mose." He knocked in one run with a double, contributed a timely single to the winning rally in the sixth and foiled the Pale Hose attempt to tie the score in the eighth, when he robbed Washington of a triple with a spectacular diving stop, directly back of first base.

The blow that actually beat Lee Tietje, however, was a double off the left field wall by "Dib" Williams with the sacks loaded in the sixth. It rescued two runs and gave Grove a lead he never lost.

It was three or nothing with the natives as far as leaving runners was concerned. In only three frames were any of the Croninmen stranded and in each the sacks were left drunk.

New York's Giants are showing a lot more fight down the stretch than they did a year back.

They came from behind with a three-run rally in the ninth to beat the Pirates in Tuesday's nightcap after they had squeezed out a 4-3 win in the opener.

As a result of this double victory, the Terrymen gained a half game on the Cardinals, who beat the Phils, and are now but 2½ games below the roof.

The Cubs remained within a game of the title when Charlie Root blanked the Braves. It was a tenth straight defeat for the Cotton Tierriors.

Connie Mack's last-place A's dropped their 13th game in a row when they fell again before the Browns.

The sixth-place Senators held their same margin over the Mound City crew by slapping a coat of whitewash on the Tigers, who started "Schoolboy" Rowe.

The defeat reduced the Bengals' lead to 7½ games over the Yanks who made it four in a row over the Indians.

"Mickey" Cochrane's friends and neighbors down in Bridgewater will honor the Detroit pilot at a banquet in the Albert Gardner-Boyden Gym, Bridgewater, next Tuesday evening. Several Tiger and Red Sox stars will be present.

McCoy Moves Duffle To Kelley and Hayes'

By Sam Cohen

Al McCoy, Dorchester lightweight, who is champion of the world in the eyes of the Montreal boxing commission, moved bag and baggage out of Buckley's gymnasium where he has been training ever since he came to Boston from Maine.

"There is not room enough here for Lou Brouillard and myself," said McCoy, so inasmuch as Brouillard's manager has a large interest in the place, I am checking out."

McCoy, who meets Brouillard in the fistic classic of a decade at the Boston Garden on Friday evening, Sept. 20, will establish his training headquarters at Kelley and Hayes gymnasium on Hanover street.

With McCoy as he checked out of Buckley's was one of his managers, Barney Fox, who had made the gymnasium he home ever since it was owned by the late Jim Toland.

"I'm sorry to leave these surroundings," said Fox, "but I'm glad I won't have to look at Johnny Buckley's kisser every day."

To which Buckley replied:

"There will probably be plenty of fresh air around here now."

McCoy is in fine condition. He recently fought a 15 round bout for the light-heavyweight championship, according to Montreal's commission, in Canada with Joe Knight of Miami, Fla., and won easily.

TIGERS LOADED POOR HARVARD

FORDHAM STRONG, TOO

By Murray Kramer

Here is bad news for Harvard . . . Princeton looms as an undefeated team for the coming season. If it turns on the pressure against the Crimson, it is apt to be just too bad.

Fritz Crisler is loaded . . . Gerry LeVan, Homer Spofford, Paul Pauk, Ken Sandbach and Pepper Constable form a veteran backfield nucleus.

In addition, Chick Kaufman, who has been out of college a year, is returning, and there are several top-notch backs from last year's frosh team.

Gil Lea and Hugh McMillan a great pair of ends, are back . . . Johnny Sivess will again be at left tackle . . . John Wiler, Bob Kopf and Tom Montgomery are available once more for the guard jobs . . . it looks like a great team.

Princeton, however, probably will lose top rating as it plays the hardest schedule of any of the major colleges.

Continuing the bad news for the section, here is a bit of information for Boston College . . . Jim Crowley was greatly disappointed over the showing of his Fordham Rams last year, and figures he will settle many scores this season . . . for one thing, he is not going to be content with a one touchdown victory over the Maroon and Gold . . . Fordham's outlook is bright.

B. C.'S ROAD

While on the subject of Boston College it looks as though the Eagles will drop three games . . . Fordham, Michigan State and Holy Cross appear to be too strong at this early date.

Curiously enough, the three opponents all use the Notre Dame offense . . . another fact worthy of mention is that Boston College has always been more successful against a Rockne offense than a Warner offense.

At Kewal, Boston University's new line coach, who has just been graduated from Northwestern, imparts some interesting information about the Western Conference . . . he claims that in the Big Ten they play the toughest football in the country, and many agree with him . . . Al figures that Ohio State and Minnesota will be for the conference championship.

Kewal favors Ohio State as the superior team, but as the Buckeyes and Gophers will not meet this year, the chances are that they will ride through undefeated . . . Illinois will cause some trouble but should do no better than third.

Hit Hard by Judge's Ruling

New York, Sept 11 (AP)—Justice Meier Steinbrink in Mineola supreme court today dismissed habeas corpus proceedings brought by operators of a greyhound racing track at Mineola and ordered them to trial on charges of gambling and pool selling.

District Attorney Martin W. Littleton of Nassau County said the decision definitely settled the illegality of dog racing in New York state.

Dickerson New Starter At Suffolk

By the Associated Press

Roy Dickerson, veteran starter on the mid and far western tracks as well as in Texas, will be at the barrier when the horses get away for the fall meeting at Suffolk Downs, Boston, Oct. 2. Dickerson now at Dorval, will replace Jim Milton, who is under contract to operate the barrier at Laurel during the month of October.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Discovery king of the handicap division, and Fred Alger's Azucar, winner of the recently Santa Anita Handicap in February, are expected to arrive at Suffolk Downs about Sept. 25 to complete their training for the $25,000 Massachusetts Handicap October 16.

Nineteen two-year-olds, including Devil Diver, Pago Pago and Sickle, winner of the juvenile stakes at Belmont Park, have been nominated for the $100 added Maplewood Handicap, which will feature the opening of Rockingham Park's fall session Monday.

Grand Slam, winner of the rich Arlington Park Futurity in the silks of P. A. Markley's Detroit-owned Bonnie Stable, probably will make his next start in the $10,000 Eastern Shore Handicap at Havre de Grace, where the Maryland fall season opens Saturday.

The mid-western flash, leading money-winning juvenile of the year, was forced to miss his engagement in the Hopeful at Saratoga, due to a bruised frog. He is reported to be training soundly again, however. He is eligible for the Belmont and Pimlico futurities.

ECKHARDT Batting .406

Durham, N. C., Sept. 11 (AP)—Apparently it is only necessary for Oscar Eckhardt of the San Francisco Missions to keep an even keel until September 22 to win the batting championship of the minor leagues for 1935. Figures released today by the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues show the Pacific Coast slugger has an average of .406, with less than two weeks of the season to run.

His nearest competitor, Chester Laabs of Fort Wayne in the Three-I League, was batting .392, and his circuit closed Sunday.

COACHING STAR WITHOUT JOB

By Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Sept. 11 (AP)—You can credit E. T. Bales of the Chattanooga Free-Press with this one:

Major Bob Neyland, who made Tennessee a household word in national football circles, wanted to go back there and coach—but was turned down.

Bales says the major (apparently he has made arrangements about that army hitch in Panama) is ready to return to the Vols right now, either as head coach or assistant . . . But Tennessee had elected to stand pat on Major Bill Brittain, Neyland's ex-aide, who was given the helm when the Army took Neyland away.

Bales on Market

It's a strange story and hard to believe . . . But Bales usually knows what he is talking about . . . Even if Tennessee felt it didn't want to do anything about Brittain's contract, how about an assistant's job? Is everyone in Knoxville so lathered up over prospects for another great team they've forgotten the departed?

Bales can Marvin Thompson and Bob Wilson of the Knoxville Journals dig up on the subject? Meantime, colleges wanting a top football coach can reach Major Neyland care of the U. S. Army at Panama City.

Special to Cleveland Joe Becker of San Francisco Olympia is being boosted as the best catching prospect in the minors . . . Members of the New York A. C. will charter a liner for the trip to the Olympics next summer . . . What unemployed football coach criticized the manner in which the collegers were handled against the Chicago Bears the other week?

Football notes: Marquette has a letter man for every position—but no reserves . . . Of the 110 members of the Notre Dame squad, 53 are genuine harriers . . . There are six Jims out at Alabama . . . Every time Coach Frank Thomas yells "Jim" half the squad comes charging up.

"Jim is the East's best long shot . . . "Lou Little Optimistic!" says a headline that hasn't appeared since before the war . . . cut it out and save it.

King Levinsky may have been in a tournament", but he's come to . . . He has bowed himself out of that prelim with Buddy Baer on the Max Baer-Louis card . . . But the King is there is will be as a spectator . . . His chin still aches where Louis cracked him . . .

Bunny Austin's brokerage business will keep him from representing England in the 1936 Davis Cup matches . . . Anyway, his mommer says Bunny is too nervous to leave his best years on the tennis court . . . which is O. K. with Allison, Van Ryn and Co.

BAER Hitting More ACCURATE

By Associated Press

Speculator, N. Y., Sept. 11 — Max Baer, realizing he will be blazing at a weaving target when he meets Joe Louis on the 24th of September, is practicing to be a sharp-shooter and apparently doing pretty well at it.

Critics watching him in his boxing routine have repeatedly remarked that his punching accuracy has improved greatly. He hasn't been swinging at the breezes as he did the night Jim Braddock stripped him of his crown.

Tony Canzoneri, Willie McGee and Lou Scozza, his sparring partners, will agree. They have been on the receiving end of some unerring punching.

FIVE PURPLE Players Ill

Worcester, Sept. 11 (INS)—Colds and injuries struck the Holy Cross football squad today. Captain Nick Morris, Jim Mohin, Charlie Bruce to, first string backs; Bob Curley, end, and Joe Curran were under hospital care.

Suspend Trainer

New York, Sept. 11—Trainer Clarence Buxton has been suspended for 60 days because the saliva test of the two-year-old Clarkedale showed traces of a drug. Clarkedale is owned by Mrs. Pinky Kandell.

INDIANS ALL

Anthony Muello, Cambridge boy, who plays end for Dartmouth, is awaiting the appearance of the Indian horde at Soldiers Field this fall with interest. He'll give John Harvard much trouble.

A burly big Green backing back who seems assured of his position as Dartmouth prepares for the current football season. Tin Landi, Waltham, is expected to star in the Hanover backfield.

50,000 SEE Softball Game

Chicago, Sept. 11 (AP)—The state of Ohio stood today as the country's softball capital.

With a crowd of 50,000 gathered in Lincoln Park yesterday to watch the finals of the national tournament, Toledo turned back Rochester, N. Y., 2 to 1, to succeed Kenosha, Wis., as man's titleholder and Cleveland defeated Chicago, 3 to 2, for the woman's crown.

Lee Goes Home To Coach

Hal Lee, Braves left fielder, who fractured his thumb in St. Louis last week, is on his way to his Louisiana home. He will play no more baseball this season.

Lee will arrive just in time to take up his football coaching duties at Mississippi State Teachers College.

EQUINES DIFFER IN COURAGE

By Ed Cogswell

Narragansett Race Track, R. I., Sept. 11—Among the trainers at this track are some of the old boys who have seen jockeys of fame, and lesser lights of the saddle, come and go. It's a thrill to listen when they are in the mood to relate a few experiences.

One, who was a side-kick of Earle Sande in the time when Earle was famous, sat for nearly an hour this morning telling how Sande gained his extensive reputation.

He dwellt at length on how Sande so well knew his horses. Even when given a mount on an absolutely new horse, immediately they both became pals.

He knew the horse instinctively, while the horse on his part seemed to realize that on his back was a true friend.

"Sande has told me," went on the veteran, "how horses differ greatly in disposition, or perhaps courage.

"Some are swash-buckling, reckless, devil-may-care fellows, which must be carefully restrained at all times lest they bump and batter everything that hindered their progress.

"Others are timid. Give them a chance for a free run, free from crowding, and they will turn in a splashing effort. But if they are in close quarters, they shrink it in a hurry.

"Many very fast and royally-bred racers, if forced to the rail with a scrambled field of opponents on the outside, simply will quit, despite every urging.

"On the other hand, some runners, like Larkspur for instance, won't do any running except at the rail. If they have to break from an outside position, they immediately try to charge helter skelter for the rail.

"Sometimes they can do it without piling up the field. Often they interfere with other horses, which means tough luck for the jockey, for he is liable to fine or suspension for not controlling his horse.

"Once there, the horse, of course, will do his real running. If no other horse is hugging the rail, the jockey can skim along, save ground and perhaps find an opening as the leaders swing into the home stretch turn."

All of this and more the veteran related, but putting it all in a nutshell it goes to prove what the ordinary race track patron has to learn of the horses to be in the position to cash in on them anywhere near to a rating in the fields of horses in which they are nominated.

Realising all of this, can it be any wonder that the official handicappers are in a mess in picking winners? It's a tough sport, this guessing 'em right.

Wilson's Choice as Best Bet

By Dave Wilson
(Selections Made or Fast Track)
BEST BET—CHANCERY

Narragansett Park, Sept. 11—Chancery, a best bet that delivered the goods only a few days back, is again given similar preference in the one mile of the Barrington Purse here tomorrow afternoon.

This good colt won his last effort in handy fashion and he will be meeting practically the same field again tomorrow. He apparently needs only an even shake in racing luck in order to romp.

FIRST—CREME DE MENTHE, SPITTENIMAGE, DIXIE FOX

CREME DE MENTHE shapes up best here on general form. She just missed drubbing Bullfinch last trip. Any sort of a track suits SPITTENIMAGE, up against it in recent starts, appears well suited here and should offer the contention. DIXIE FOX is usually there about and merits serious consideration.

SECOND—IRISH HERO, HERONDAS, MAD DASH

IRISH HERO figures to be hard to down if given a chance to parade postwards. The Archibald colt ran a winning race last time out after being all but left at the gate. HERONDAS was the runner up to Prank over a muddy track last time out. He figures all dangerous. MAD DASH'S recent efforts have been very good.

THIRD—STHENUOUS, CHIMNEY TOP, PANA FRANKA

STHENUOUS always turns in a corking effort first crack out of the box after a long lay-off. Her trials have been very good. CHIMNEY TOP figures to improve with C. Stevenson in the pilot house. He was badly messed about by I. Hanford the last two times. PANA FRANKA is dropping down a few pegs. She is capable of upsetting the dope.

FOURTH—SOME GOOD, GLYNDON BELLE, BARCAROLLE

SOME GOOD romped home in 1 11 last time out. A duplicate of that performance should insure brackets. GLYNDON BELLE is beags better than her most recent effort attests. She figures to offer the contention. BARCAROLE is dropping down. He figures well on best races.

FIFTH—CHANCERY, TIME FLIGHT, SKIP IT

If anything upsets my dope and hands CHANCERY a drubbing, it will likely be TIME FLIGHT. The latter is coming off several corking sprint efforts, and the route should be fairly within the realm of his staying powers. SKIP IT turned in a dull effort last trip. Previous dope gives him, at least, a fighting chance.

SIXTH—BIG GAWK, HIGH FINANCE, FREE

BIG GAWK did not fancy the heavy footing last trip. Going back to previous efforts over a dry strip, he looks all over a winner. HIGH FINANCE was a surprise winner last time. A duplicate of that performance would make him all dangerous. FREE has won his last two races in cheaper company.

SEVENTH—BETHLEHEM STAR, PREFER, GOLDEN VEIN

BETHLEHEM STAR'S last effort goes for the laddies on the end book. He did nonl like the heavy footing that day. In a previous engagement he turned in a corking second to Winged Flight. PREFER was pinned down on the rail in the deep going and never had a chance last time. GOLDEN VEIN'S most recent effort was much too poor to be true.

EIGHTH—GUARDIAN, WAR TIDE, GUIDING LIGHT

GUARDIAN just missed drubbing Polly B. last trip. A duplicate of that effort should make him the winner over this indifferent lot. WAR TIDE was third to the top one and again shapes up as the main danger. GUIDING LIGHT breezed a mile in 1:42 in preparation for this. She is highly fancied by the clocker.

COONEY Up With Dodgers

Cincinnati, Sept. 11 (AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers today announced the purchase of Johnny Cooney, outfielder, and Vincent Sherlock, second baseman, from the Indianapolis Club of the American Association for cash and players not yet identified. Cooney and Sherlock will report to the Dodgers when they reach Chicago Sunday.

Cooney is leading the association in batting with a .368 average. Sherlock is batting .305. Cooney once was a pitcher and was with the New York Giants and Boston Braves.

TILDEN TOPS Pro Draw

New York, Sept. 11 (AP)—William T. Tilden, 2nd, and Karel Kozeluh, the Czechoslovakian, are seeded first and second for the national professional championship tournament beginning Wednesday, Sept. 11, on the hard courts of the Terrace Club in Brooklyn.

Redskin Tyro

Ralph Wolfendale, of Lawrence, former Fordham backie, is trying for a berth with the Boston Redskins.

TORRINGTON

Compiles

STABLE

Record

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

Boston listed Torrington continues to compile an excellent record for earning stability. At the same time the balance sheet for the year ending June 30, 1935, presents the usual clean appearance.

On a per share basis the company shows $3.80 against $3.82 in the previous year. Working capital shows a record of $212,100; deducted for by the difference in earnings and the payment of a $2 semi-dividend half leaves conservative valuation of holdings of government bonds and own shares provides a liquid asset account for statisticians amounting to $1,956,527. Current assets totaled $7,853,127 against current liabilities of $681,480. Torrington, well handled in depression years, seems in an excellent position to benefit by any pickup in demand for knitting machines and sewing machine needles, high grade bearings and metal spokes, in which it specializes.

Real estate is looking up. Revival of construction in some localities is promising, but in general actual conditions is the real source of optimism. The National Association of Real Estate Boards report is the one we like for breakfown purposes. Of 251 cities reporting to the organization, 56 per cent showing over-building has dropped from 11 in 1931 to 2 in 1935. In the same period 44 per cent reporting a shortage lifted from 17 to 69. That is for single family dwellings. In the two-family class essential field conditions are also much improved. The per cent reporting a shortage fell to 5 in 1935 but has risen to 29 this summer.

Notebook: The above reports in our opinion truly reflect a basic improvement in the real estate situation and forecast marked gains for the construction industry... Daily note on rails is as follows: Reliable information tells us to expect carloadings report to exceed around 700,000 from now until well into November...American Woolen preferred is available at ... Up and over the 53 marker was our hope... Such action put it out in the clear and distinctly higher prices are visioned.

Attempts to say something new or colorful about recent market action are not only shortsighted, but dangerous. The entire stock list needs and must have the wholehearted support of the public if there is to be a worthwhile advance. Judging by earlier action today this support may be forthcoming. It is not a question of splitting participation in the market as some professional traders are doing among the various groups, but of concentrating in the rail issues. I recovered to date in the rail thing rail shares of the better sort have a long way to go to reflect it.

Shorts: When looking over the New England mill shares attention seems to...Arlington Mills ... Traded over-the-counter in the low 20's, with earnings showing for the year to date, the stock has possibilities in our opinion. ... The low-priced stocks are beginning to show something ... As they usually do as the market starts to get ready for that best spurts on the upside ... With the rails really going and low-priced shares hiking, care is required to avoid buying distribution situations elsewhere ... Those issues that have had long and gay rides ripped.

'Ghost in the Mortuary'

Bob Unger Hears Strange Noises in the Embalming Room—at 3 A. M.

By FLOYD GIBBONS

FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

Well, sir, Bob Unger of 760 Tinton avenue, Bronx, N. Y., doesn't think much of our hair-raisers. It's all very well, he says, to fall off mountains or grab hold of high tension wires, or even accidentally take a nose-dive into a sausage machine, but that's nothing to running across a ghost in an undertaking establishment.

Bob had an experience like that once—a very terrible experience, if anybody should ask you—that he hasn't quite gotten over yet, even if it did happen as far back as the month of April in the year 1920. And he is here now to tell us the story—a yarn full of corpses and black cats and what-not, and one that's guaranteed to give you more nightmares than six Welsh rarebits eaten ten minutes before going to bed.

It was back in the days when Bob was learning the embalming trade. He had gone into a local undertaking house to get himself some experience, and one of his tasks was to take his turn at staying on watch—spending the night alone with the dead in the big, silent embalming room.

Well, to make a long story short, it was Bob's turn to take over the watch. He had just sent a sobbing old lady home in a taxicab and was standing in the doorway gazing out through the plate-glass panel at the deserted street, wet and soggy from a heavy April rain.

Maybe it was the rain and maybe it was just plain lonesomeness. Anyway, there seemed to Bob to be something sinister and unpleasant in the atmosphere.

He turned, walked to the parlor door and looked in on three corpses laid out on embalming boards. The room gave him the creeps and so did the embalming room, three doors down the hall. The boys also used that embalming room for a sort of a kitchen, where they fixed themselves a bite to eat during the long, all-night vigil. But Bob didn't have any craving for food that night. He went back to the front office and sat down at the desk to read a newspaper.

Lost in the newspaper, Bob forgot the eerie feeling that had possessed him. Time sped on until presently the clock struck 3. Then, suddenly, he was startled by a loud crash somewhere behind him.

"What was that?" Bob listened, but not another sound came from the rear of the building. Then to his ears came another sound, fainter than the first—as if a dish were rattling gently on the floor.

"I rose to my feet," says Bob, "with cold chills running all over my back. That sound had come from the embalming room. I went into the parlor—but all was still as death—the death with which the room was filled. It was dark in there, too. I didn't want to go in.

"I called, 'Who's there?' and the words came from my mouth in a hollow croak.

"I grabbed up a heavy brass candlestick, and, taking a firm grip on it, stepped into the parlor, looking suspiciously at those three corpses. Reaching over the center corpse I tried to grasp the light string. I had to lean against the bier to reach it, but I snapped it on and moved toward the embalming room. At the doorway, though, I stopped to look back. And then my hair began to stand on end as a ghastly sight met my eyes. The hand of the center corpse was moving slowly away from its chest.

"With a sudden swing the arm slid off the chest and dangled limply beside the bier. Now I was in the grip of panic. I backed into the next room—and screamed as something lay softly on my shoulder. It was only a coat hanging on a clothes tree, but it served to increase my terror. I was in the embalming room now and it was pitch dark. Then, suddenly, my heart stopped beating altogether. I almost fainted from fright. For there, on the other side of the room, two large, green eyes glared at me out of the dark.

"I let out a wild yell and hurled the candlestick I held in my hand. It missed those glaring eyes and went through a window. Sobbing with fear, I lunged at the chandelier cord and turned on the last unlighted light in the place. And then, while the perspiration streamed down my forehead, the cause of all my troubles leaped out of a corner, dived through the broken window and was gone."

What was it? A tom cat! One look at him—and one look around the room—and Bob had things all figured out. That day embalmers had left part of a can of salmon in a dish in the cupboard, and the cat, in trying to reach it, had upset the dish and knocked it off the shelf. And, as for the corpse that moved its hand—well—after thinking that over a bit, Bob remembered how he'd leaned against the bier when he pulled the light cord. He had jogged that bier just enough to set the hand to si ding.

Governor James M. Curley today invited the governors of the New England states to attend Constitution Day exercises to be held in Faneuil Hall, Tuesday, September 17.

Two observances will be held in Faneuil Hall one in the afternoon a n d the other in the evening. T h e public has been invited to attend a n d the entire program will be broadcast o v e r the National Broadcasting System.

Miss Sheila Rossa

Archibald R. Giroux, chairman of the National Constitution Day committee at his headquarters located at 6 Beacon street, announced that during the past few days he had received letters from more than 25 patriotic organizations announcing their intentions of participating in the observance.

PLEDGE SUPPORT

The number of organizations which have pledged their support has already reached 100.

The latest organization to endorse the Constitution Day observances is the All Boston Women's Democratic Club, headed by Miss Sheila O'Donovan Rossa, president.

At a meeting held in the Hotel Brunswick last night the organization unanimously adopted a resolution asking that Democratic women's clubs throughout the state observe Constitution Day.

STRESSES IMPORTANCE

In addressing the meeting President Rossa said:

"We know of nothing more important in the present state of affairs than to remind the citizens of Massachusetts of the importance and understanding of the Constitution.

"We should try and succeed in stirring up tremendous interest in the observance of the 148th birthday of the Constitution.

"Today we should realize the importance of this immortal document, which the greatest men have agreed is the greatest plan for the advancement of the human welfare and happiness which has ever been penned by the hands of men, and we must do our part in maintaining this priceless heritage for future generations."

FIRST AID SAVES Roxbury Boy

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS —TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS!

Breathing fire and brimstone and utter defiance, Squadron 127, nicknamed the "Popeye" unit, commanded by Sidney Wallerstein, 22 Johnston road, Dorchester, is hurling a challenge to any competitive model building unit of Junior Birdmen in Greater Boston.

The three officers, Commander Wallerstein, Captain Sanford Orringer, 46 Mascot street, and Sergeant Arthur Sampson, 18 Evelyn street, all of Dorchester, called at headquarters yesterday to announce boldly that they will smother in defeat any other squadron in a test of hand-launched gliders of from 30 to 100 square inches in area and commercial R. O. G.'s weighing one ounce to each 50 square inches in area.

"We'll throw any squadron for a loop in these two events," declared the three stalwart officers. "We bar no one. We are the best model building and flying squadron in Boston and we don't except any champions like Bruno Marchi, Torrey Capo and others who "happened" to win their titles because the rest of us broke a leg or got a sore arm or something at the crucial moment.

"Take Torrey for instance. He used to be pretty good but he's getting old. He used to have some power in his arm to launch a glider but nowadays he seems to have no more strength than the touch of a baby's finger. But we'll take him and his squadron if he and his assistants, who do most of his work, can get there in their speed chairs.

"And look at Bruno. He's even wearing a mustache now to show how the well-informed model builder should appear in public. That's a rank display of superiority. Why our planes will sweep by his face so fast they'll blow off that mustache and he won't have to shave for a year.

"We're tired of being high-hatted by accidental champions.

"Bob' Shea, Frank Barrett, Charles Freeman and Leonard Wittenberg are all in squadrons that think they are pretty hot. We'll cool 'em down—if they dare meet us on our own grounds and with our own timers.

"And then there are the Comets, commanded by Ray Townsend, 1038 Canterbury street, Roslindale, and the Leaping Leans of Everett, commanded by Leslie Woodman. Whoever heard of them? What records do they hold? Why Leslie only took second place in the novice contest. He would've won that affair if we hadn't been sick or something.

"And these aces—well, Kenneth Budgell, Manual Ford, 'Dave' Adelstone and the others can just watch our smoke—if they accept our challenge. If they don't and we don't suppose any of them will, they'll have to admit that the Popeyes are the real, unofficial champion model plane fliers of the Boston wing."

Here are the telephone numbers of the challenger: Sidney Wallerstein—Talbot 7514; Sanford Orringer—Talbot 6206, and "Art" Sampson—Blue Hills 2038.

The challenge is open to all Junior Birdmen and the Popeye Squadron is in earnest. They are trying now to get some prizes. If they win they will keep the prizes themselves and if they lose, which they declared loudly and vociferously is impossible, they will hand the prizes to the victors.

If any members desire to accept the challenge they should drop in or write to headquarters and give their appropriate answers to the wing commander. Their answers will be printed in this column.

Constitution Fete on Radio

By Universal Service

New York, Sept. 11—Radio will hang up a new record for patriotic service, in connection with the broadcast of addresses and dramatizations incident to the observance, on September 17, of the 148th birthday of the American Constitution.

Stay-at-homes, unable to participate in the hundreds of Constitution Day programs, to be staged from coast to coast, will, via radio, hear the historic document eulogized and analyzed by distinguished men and women of every political faith.

Several additional Constitution Day speakers were announced yesterday. Among these are Secretary of Commerce Roper and Representative Sol Bloom, of New York. Secretary Roper will be heard over the NBC-WEAF network, September 17, at 10:30 p. m. Eastern Daylight Time. On the same day, Representative Bloom will speak over the NBC-WJZ network at 7:45 p. m.

Representative Virginia Jenckes, of Indiana, will speak September 14, over the NBC-WEAF network at 6:45 p. m. Eastern Daylight Time, on "The American Flag Act and the Constitution."

Radio Answers

A—He is single, 28 years old and a resident of Dorchester.

Q—How many hats has local station WLOE been off the air?

Two Bills. of Weymouth.

A—The longest program was on December 20th, 1933.

Q—Is the screen actor Conrad Nagle doing microphone dramatic work under another name? If so where can he be heard?

Molly, of Marlborough.

A—Not regularly, but occasionally in a guest artist role. He is believed to be booked for a special appearance next Monday night in the "Radio Theater" hour. Watch the schedules.

JACK NORWORTH RADIO GUEST TONIGHT

By N. F. T.

Not too many patrons of present day performances, theatrical and athletic, can readily call to mind the name Norworth as the composer of such beloved musical gems as "Take Me Out to the Ball G a m e" or "Shine on Harvest Moon" and "Where Is the Apple Blossom Time in Normandy."

This same gifted J a c k Norworth is a very special const - to - coast guest (WEZ) who breaks through during the 8 to 8:30 half hour this evening.

Veteran of early musical comedy days, Norworth has shunned the limelight of late, rather than having been shunned by it. He promises, however, to revive a number of his well-remembered melodies tonight.

Further, he even expresses the desire to again become an active contemporary creator of lively lyrics. At the rate of popular song consumption behind microphones, radio should welcome his contemplated writings with proverbial open arms.

Mozart's amusing "Musical Joke," seldom presented on the air, provides a featured selection for the Alfred Wallenstein Sinfonietta setting (WAAB) when it wafts into space between 9:30 and 10 o'clock this evening.

Many discordant passages break the theme, which was especially written by Mozart for small orchestra rendition. Even so, it rates as one of the truly superior works in the library of the celebrated master.

Police Head's Son on Air

Newest of the orchestra overlords in local radio ranks, is young and blonde Jack McSweeney.

An ardent student of music, this youthful aspirant for air honors, has landed his tune troupe in a regular berth for broadcasting. He even has a sponsor, which gives his ten piece group real standing in the Hub sound sanctum scene.

Each Wednesday night his outfit makes ready, he lifts his bamboo baton and the boys play. Listeners tuned to WEEI waves thereupon hear his talented lads fiddle and toot. His own voice gives effective expression to the current popular pieces, both lively and ballad in character.

According to Jack, a student at Brown University, the saxophone is his favorite instrument. Music of every variety is his hobby, and quite likely to be his chosen life

Although the fond father of Jack is Police Commissioner Eugene M. McSweeney of Boston, it is understood between them there must be no excuses made to traffic officers about being late for his program in the event of any speed violations.

"THE American Constitution is, so far as I can see, THE MOST WONDERFUL WORK ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man."—WILLIAM E. GLADSTONE, England's illustrious statesman, in an article, "Kin Beyond Sea," published in September, 1878.

HUEY P. LONG

THE country is saddened by the death of Huey Long.

Make no mistake about it.

Beneath his extravagances of speech and showman methods there were qualities of mind and heart and, perhaps, of sincerity, which demanded respectful approach.

That he was a man of exceptional resourcefulness and mental agility, no one, and certainly none of his fellow senators, will gainsay.

Uncouth at times, assuming a homeliness of speech and bearing that was all put on, yet effective, he made himself in a short space of time one of the most dynamic or popular agitators, and, to the extent that his appeals were based upon false premises, one of the most dangerous.

Much that he talked was arrant nonsense, such as the alleged concentration of wealth in the hands of a minor fraction of our people.

The personal absolutism, which he succeeded in substituting for Democratic self-government in Louisiana, was a shocking departure from our American theories of government by law and the free choice of the people.

THE structure that he reared in his home state by favoritism, force and threat, of course cannot stand.

Its disintegration may be rapid or slow, but its eventual collapse is certain.

Nothing so contrary to the spirit of our institutions and so at variance with our character as a people can possibly endure.

But despite his grave mistakes and the devices he employed for capturing and holding public attention, despite his reckless use of the instrumentalities of government, there was something in him that men admire.

He had the courage to stand alone, to face power undaunted, to fight against odds, to answer derision and abuse with good nature and to puncture shams.

And these are not unimportant entries on the credit side of any man's character.

The country had not made up its mind about Huey Long.

It wanted to see more of him and to find out where he was going.

There was TALENT there—some VIRTUES in the raw.

What time and sobering experience might have done for him was an interesting speculation—ended now by a tragedy that is universally deplored.

"Old Potato!"

Al Smith Was Right

First the Boston Tea Party, then Concord Bridge.

The revolt against the outrageous potato-control bill was begun in New Jersey, when Dean Carl Ackerman and some sturdy American farmer friends announced their intention of raising potatoes in the manner in which they have always been accustomed to raising them—AS THEY PLEASE.

Now Senator James W. Wadsworth takes his stand on Concord Bridge and announces to the unconstitutionalists in control of the government:

"I INTEND TO RAISE MORE THAN FIVE BUSHELS OF POTATOES NEXT YEAR, AND I SHALL SELL THEM WHERE I PLEASE. I WILL NOT HAVE THE GOVERNMENT TELL ME HOW TO RUN MY FARM."

This has the ring of the Constitution in it!

It was Al Smith who once affectionately called Franklin D. Roosevelt "Old Potato."

For Break With Russia

On the Honor Roll

Note that the American Legion of New Hampshire is the latest to go on the honor roll of those calling for severance of relations with Soviet Russia.

The Associated Press list of Legion groups taking a similar stand previously included Missouri, Oregon, Illinois, District of Columbia, Idaho, Georgia, Tennessee and Michigan.

The New Hampshire Legion goes a step farther.

It calls for DEPORTATION of ALL Communists known to express or cherish sentiments subversive to the Government of the United States.

It seems as if ONLY TRAITORS to America could oppose such a program.

American Railroads

And Safety

Not one passenger on American railroads was killed during the first five months of 1935, according to a study completed this week.

The study goes too far when it contrasts this record with that of the grade crossings.

For grade crossing accidents in Massachusetts and elsewhere are as a rule something over which the railroads have scant control.

The reckless automobilists—a small percentage of those who drive—crash through closed gates and pay no heed to warning signals.

That 630 were killed in such accidents in the first five months of 1935 is NOT surprising.

The death toll in the like period a year ago was 617.

It appears we must reasonably expect to find a certain percentage of folly at the steering wheel.

And the figures indicate the percentage of it doesn't vary much, despite the dreadful warning of injury and death.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Sept. 11—Jascha Heifetz has attained the peak of his musical career and is likely to stay there for a number of years. His astonishing draw at the Stadium concerts some weeks ago surpassed any event ever held there. For two successive evenings his audience numbered more than 16,000 each.

O. O. McIntyre

The vast gatherings that heard his concerted with the Philharmonic realized they were hearing an artist who is neck and neck with Kreisler as the greatest violinists of their day. The magnificent silences followed by outbursts of cheering formed a dramatic emotional contrast.

Since Heifetz came to America a boy prodigy, he has grown steadily in the esteem of music lovers and critics. The past few years—perhaps since his marriage to Florence Vidor, the movie star—have brought forth increasing "heart," beauty and fire to his playing. Doubtless he is now at the top.

The violinist is still in his early 30's and has two lovely children, a boy and a girl. When he is not on tour divides his time between Balboa, Cal., and a Park avenue penthouse and plays in all corners of the globe. Added to his genius is a keen sense of humor.

Fifty-second street, between Fifth and Sixth avenues, continues to be the most astonishing restaurant block New York has ever known. In a mushroom growth, it has in a two-year-stretch added 18 eating places to the block's pioneers—Tony's and No. 21.

Many are open-fronted with sidewalk tables. And quite a number prosper solely on overflow trade. The next block east is also becoming cafe conscious and six Frenchified places have opened.

I hear Will Rogers, so fidgety on terra firma, was as composed as a statue, flying. It's the only way he found to relax. He did not even chew gum. Also he was without slightest flying fear, being somewhat a fatalist.

The thing that worried him most in the air travels was his daily newspaper dispatch. He was not satisfied unless he delivered the piece, country boy style, to a telegraph office in person. Often he scribbled it on an old envelope.

Western North Carolina, a correspondent reveals, leads in outlandish names for little out-of-the-way places. Among them: Rip Shin Hollow, Dog Hobble Ridge, Frog Level, No Business Creek, Buzzard Roost, Skull Knob, Grinning Eye, Burnt Cabin Branch and Sway Back Hill.

Henry Mencken, so far as I know, has been the only campaigner against authors and publishers who dish out books without index. His fulminations against indexless volumes have done much to promote their inclusion the past few years. He believes any book that carries more than 15 names of actual people should list them alphabetically in the back.

Incidentally, Mencken's endorsement over a decade has been an enormous factor in sales of books. Even when his praise was confined to the limited circulation of the American Mercury it resulted in a word of mouth spread that often fostered best sellers.

He was first to forecast the popularity of Sinclair Lewis. He saw talent in the first crude efforts of Jim Tulley, the life terminer. Ernest Boyd and many others. Despite omnivorous reading, he reads slowly and often when a volume takes his fancy will re-read several times before going on to another.

What the newspaper editorial room knows as the Lobster Trick is perhaps the profession's most ingiorious post and yet in ways vastly important. The origin of the term is vague and has many versions but is descriptive of the watchman on guard, as a rule, from 1 a. m. until the arrival of the regular morning staff.

The man on the Lobster Trick is often a one-man editorial force, executing a score of different tasks. If a cataclysmic story breaks he is the general in command, routing the various departments and starting the first motions that in a short time will have the presses awhirr with extra editions.

Sometimes he is one who has served in the highest posts at home and abroad but on the down grade prefers the anonymity of the Lobster Trick.

From a feature story:

"During the lawn party, the actress" Peke stepped on a lighted cigaret and with a yelp began scratching a hole in the ground."

We tried to hold back but—step away from those guy lines, please—just have to let go:

"Hot Diggedy Dog!"

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

SHOULD AMERICAN STUDENTS ATTEND RED MEETINGS?

The following is a real letter. Have I received many such? Yes, they are an almost daily occurrence. And, frankly, I don't know how to answer them. How would YOU?

Dear Miss Robinson:

Do you think it's okay for a high school boy to attend Communist meetings? We all get invitations, but our folks throw a lot of "Reds" are bums, but on the other hand there are a lot of pretty smart people in the organization. Some of my friends, who have already been graduated, can't get jobs at all, and I know I'm faced with the same prospect.

Even us school kids know there is certainly something wrong when the schools keep turning us out with no place to go. And it seems to me that there's no harm in studying any organization that is trying to help workers.

FRED.

So what? Before you give your answer or pass on mine remember this:

UNDER OUR CONSTITUTION AND LAWS IT'S LEGAL TO HAVE A COMMUNISTIC PARTY IN AMERICA. LEGAL TO BE A COMMUNIST.

Regardless of how we feel about Communistic activities—and most of us feel PLENTY! we've no more right, LEGALLY, to forbid Communistic discussions than we have to forbid Republican or Democratic discussions.

And we only place ourselves on a par with other lawbreakers if we defy this law. So, before we start dislodging the other fellow from HIS position, maybe we'd better do a little tinkering on our own.

In the meantime, what are we going to do about hot-blooded, inquisitive Youth? You can't keep youngsters from wanting to know what the world is all about.

Nor can you keep agitators from trying to tell them, and enlisting their services. We, by those same laws, have opened the door to them.

THERE'S HARDLY A YOUNGSTER OVER 18 WHO ISN'T BEING SO APPROACHED BY THE COMMUNISTS.

Suppose it were your youngster. What should you do? Shout, threaten, sneer, sermonize? Go on if you want, but, I warn you, it'll buy you nothing.

Personally, I believe in respecting Youth's sincerity, treasuring its enthusiasm and giving it Straight Dope. As follows:

Don't do it, youngster! NOT YET. Later, when you've had more experience and are better able to judge values, it won't hurt you to attend those meetings. But for the present, they'll only upset and warp your attitude.

There are three smart "Reds." That's just the trouble. They're so smart you won't be able to see the fallacy of their arguments.

There IS something wrong with America and, in your fine, clear idealism, you want to right that wrong. But the Communist won't tell you how. To him, EVERYTHING is wrong. And that's because everything about the European and Asiatic is different from the American.

He uses our words, but he hasn't the slightest conception of our needs, our dreams, desires. And out of his ignorance comes inevitable suspicion and hate. Being what he is, judging by alien standards, he sees only the blunders.

He does not see the splendid ideal that lies behind those blunders. It is as a bleeding mad turtle were to try to shape a program for an eagle!

IF THE RED COATS OF KING GEORGE COULDN'T SETTLE OUR PROBLEMS IN 1776, YOU CAN BET THAT THE COSSACK BLOUSE OF COMRADE STALIN CAN'T SETTLE THEM FOR US IN 1935.

America needs help. Where should she look for it. SHE SHOULD LOOK AMONGST THOSE WHO INHERIT HER BLOOD, HER DREAMS, HER PROBLEMS AND POSSESSIONS . . .

SHE SHOULD LOOK TO YOU, HER CHILD!

Would you desert your physical mother in her hour of need, hand her over to a stranger's doubtful mercy? Everything decent in you revolts at the idea.

THEN NEITHER SHOULD YOU DESERT YOUR MOTHER IN HER DARK HOUR NOR ABANDON HER TO THE CONTEMPT AND ABUSE OF GREEDY FOREIGNERS.

Stand by America, son! Don't deny her blunders. Keep your eyes open to a possible cure.

But don't look for that cure in the ranks of those who are alien and antagonistic to everything in her. Look, instead, in those places where your enthusiasm will be strengthened, your vision enlarged, your loyalty encouraged!

THEN GIVE HER ALL YOU HAVE . . . AND THANK GOD FOR THE CHANCE!

That's my answer to this youngster. What's YOURS?

Machines Move Again

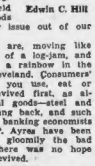
Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

It may be that some future age will record September 11, 1935, as the date when the dove landed on the ark and the waters of the depression began to recede. For today, the 1935 Machine Tool Show, the first heavy duty industry show since the start of the depression, will open in Cleveland.

Without exception, every economic horoscope has charted the beginning of a movement in the field of capital goods as a happy issue out of our afflictions.



Edwin C. Hill

Here they are, moving like the breaking of a log-jam, and it looks like a rainbow in the sky over Cleveland. Consumers' goods—what you use, eat or wear out—revived first, as always. Capital goods—steel and machines—hung back, and such distinguished banking economists as Colonel P. Ayres have been ding-donging gloomily the bad news that there was no hope until they revived.

CALLED THE TURN

This, through the long years of the depression, they stubbornly refused to do. But a few months ago, General Charles G. Dawes predicted a break this summer. He called the date, almost to a day, when the steel output began to climb and economists began to say that the new life in capital goods meant the end of the depression.

Concurrently, plans for the Cleveland show were announced, without getting much attention. But in succeeding weeks, national interest and participation in the show has mounted daily, and thousands are heading toward Cleveland to see the re-awakened giant stretch his steel limbs.

The last show, held in 1929, was regarded as a whale of a show, but this one will be just 50 per cent bigger, occupying all the available space of the Cleveland Municipal Exposition Hall, which is about five and one-half acres. More than 900 machines, valued at about $4,000,000, will be on exhibition. Most of them will be in action requiring electrical current sufficient to light a fair-sized city, such as Zanesville, O., or Fort Smith, Ark.

The show will dramatize a body blow at machine obsolescence. In the harrowing and intensifying drives for world markets, obsolescence cripples a nation. Japan, within the last few years, got away out in front by a technological assault, scrapping old machines ruthlessly and replacing them with the best that up-to-the-minute technology could provide.

Czechoslovakia and France began following her lead, and even sedate old England, which hates to check a pasmola machine, began getting in line. And now we join the race.

This is the first machine tool show in which women have been assigned important participation. These women include Helen Dryden, designer of textiles and hardware; Ilonka Karasz, furniture designer, who recently has been specializing in nursery furniture and children's metal toys; Helen Volka, textile expert and style consultant; Pola Hoffman, also distinguished in textile and metal designing, and Virginia Hamill, Ruth Reeves and Marguerita Margentina, all well known as designers of textiles

It is perhaps not too much of a digression here to recall that America has a "lady Edison," a great inventor, who holds scores of highly profitable patents and who has solved problems of machine technique which had baffled engineers and technicians. She is Beulah Louis Henry, of Charlotte, North Carolina. Without technical training of any kind, she keeps on inventing and perfecting valves, gadgets and all sorts of devices and machine accessories, useful and profitable.

OUT OF THE AIR!

She says her inspirations "just come out of the air." She sits on the floor with rubber bands and hair pins, visualizing cause and effect and the one available answer to a given problem. She has no skill in draughtsmanship, explaining her ideas to someone who can understand and blueprint her inventions. Psychologists who have studied her find something like clairvoyance in her amazing achievements.

The machine tool show will run from September 11 to September 20, inclusive. It interested me to see that every address and discussion in the long program has to do with technical problems—none with the relation of the machine and accelerated technology to human relationships, to social problems or the distribution of wealth.

Perhaps it is just as well that the shoemaker sticks to his last. "The machine toolmakers aren't "shelling out" with the pale cast of thought." Somehow the heresays of volcanic forces which they release again suggest the Gulliver which is America tearing himself loose from the things with which the Lilliputians—politics and abstract theory have bound him.

165,000 New Tax-Eaters

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.

North, East, South and West the tax-ridden people of this oppressed country are beginning to add the bitter fruits of government of politicians, by politicians, for politicians.

This spurious substitute for government "of the people, by the people, for the people" is costing the household of the Nation every year nearly fifteen thousand million dollars.

The largest public debt ever saddled on the people of the United States is one of these bitter fruits. Before another fiscal year begins it will total fifty-five thousand million dollars.

PILE UP PUBLIC DEBT

This public debt has been piled up by the existence of 182,000 political units—each with the power to incur public debt.

These little governments, established and dominated by the politicians, extend from the Federal City through forty-eight States, with 3000 odd counties, 16,000 odd cities, towns and villages, 128,000 school districts, 19,000 townships and 14,000 other political subdivisions.

One statistician estimates that for years to come "the Federal tax bill will be about five thousand million dollars, even after the budget is balanced and the beginning made on the retirement of the huge debt burden." Another statistician finds that the Federal Government now has on its payroll "the largest number of Federal employes in peace-time history," and has added 165,000 to its payroll in the last 29 months.

These additions do not include the personnel of the armed forces which the politicians had reduced below the danger level until they were finally forced by public sentiment to begin their rebuilding.

THEY EMPLOYEES

Nor do these additions include the deserving young Americans who are doing useful work in the camps of the Civilian Conservation Corps or the needy farmers who have been receiving aid from the Treasury, or the war veterans who have been pensioned.

The 165,000 whom the politicians have added to the Federal payroll since 1933 are civil employes in the Government and for the most part they have been appointed in accordance with regard of the merit system and without any fair test of their qualifications.

Civil employes on the Federal payroll today total 720,000. And the number of civil employes on the payrolls of the 48 States and the 3000 other political units which the people are taxed to support has yet to be added to the grand total of all civil government employes when arrived at will be many hundred times the number of those now on the Federal payroll.

A STRANGE TALE

By Edgar A. Guest

"She was a woman we'd known in France
And it happened to meet her in town by chance.
Hard and cruel and cold was she
And I wondered then what her game might be.
So I stopped to talk. It was just a whim.
And she 'old me she'd come into town for him.
And he was the friend who had saved my life,
Now with two kids and a loving wife.

"Under the rain of fire he'd crawled
Out to the shell hole where I lay sprawled.
Bleeding and mangled and hard of breath.
To snatch me right from the jaws of death.
And I saw him smile as he heard me say:
'I'll do the same thing for you some day.'
But 'it isn't often a 'ellow gets
A chance in this world to square such debts.

"Well, we both came back and we settled down;
He the cleverest man in town.
Honored, respected, his home serene,
And there that woman came into the scene.
I had nothing and he had much,
And she let the one she had picked to touch.
Ruin and follow the charge
she'd make.
And thus was the life of my friend at stake.

"You might tell the judge, since he never knew,
Why so vicious a crime I was moved to do.
It's been eighteen years since the day he stood
In court to say: 'You are just no good.'
For I couldn't tell him the reason why
I had fired that shot. Now, I'm soon to die
And no harm can come, you may tell him, too,
How I saved his life as I said
I'd do."
